Kennedy Honors Gov. Wallace

. . .Senator Says Nixonites Trample Constitutional Principles

DECATUR, Ala. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy called on the South on Wednesday to "surmount the injustices of the present and the divisions of the past" in helping to restore constitutional principles "trampled upon" by the Nixon administration.

Kennedy was in Alabama to honor Gov. George C. Wallace. Wallace was to receive this city's annual award for exemplifying American principles at an Independence Day "Spirit of America" festival.

Kennedy never mentioned the word Watergate nor the name of President Nixon in his prepared speech. However, the Massachusetts Democrat said that the administration has "transgressed, ignored and trampled upon" the nation's historic constitutional creed.

Kennedy said "it is the people's power and the people's money and the people's government which has been abused and perverted for the benefit of a favored few."

Kennedy said the administration "has taken the most radical steps toward dismembering the spirit of our revolution and the protection of the Constitution.

"They have transformed public institutions into instruments of intimidation and control — turning to their own benefit not only agencies of intelligence and law enforcement but an immense mechanism of economic sanction and reward," he said.

"They have usurped and abused power which belongs to the Congress, the states, to the sovereign people — and, indeed, have assumed power which the Constitution refuses to any man or to any body of men," the senator said.

The setting for the joint appearance of the leaders of two hitherto divergent Democratic party wings — and potential 1976 presidential rivals — was an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration. A flag-decked stand overlooked the country fair-style midway, lined by concession booths and games of skill.

Adding to the political significance of the theoretically nonpolitical patriotic event was the presence of Robert S. Strauss, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Kennedy noted his differences with Wallace but observed that they both were on an alleged Nixon administration "enemy list." He added: "We don't compile lists of enemies whose careers and lives are to be shattered because of their disagreement."

The senator said he came to Alabama because Wallace stands for "the right of every American to speak his mind and be heard — fearlessly and in any part of the country.

"George Wallace almost lost his life — he sits before you in a wheel chair today — because of his belief in that spirit," Kennedy said.

"Two of my brothers have been killed because they shared that belief."

Kennedy combined patriotic and economic appeals by declaring that the administration denies Americans fair taxation for which "our ancestors took up arms" in Revolutionary days.

"Not just content with the depredations of unjust taxes and high interest," Kennedy said, "they are responsible for an inflation which penny by penny, day by day lowers the earnings and savings, pension and insurance of the great majority, even while profits soar.

"They have so degraded the eminence of America in the community of the world that the dollar itself is now dependent upon the good will of those nations which, under Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman, we conquered and helped to rebuild," Kennedy said.

"I can assure you that will be changed by the people of Massachusetts," the senator said. "And it will be changed by the people of Alabama."

He accused the Nixon administration of failing "to insure black Americans that equal access to education and jobs" that is their American birthright. But Kennedy said "let no one think I come to lecture you on that racial injustice which has proven to be as deeply imbedded and resistant in the cities of the North as in the counties of the South.

"Indeed," he said, "Southerners may know even better than others of the need for leadership to free all men, white and black, from hatred and the consequences of hatred."

Noting that Thomas Jefferson cited the Constitution as the means for preventing despotism stemming from overconfidence in man, Kennedy said it is as important to follow his advice as it is to honor his authorship of the Declaration of Independence.

"Those who violate the law — whether on the streets of Boston or in the high councils of government — shall be brought to justice," he said.

"Those who are proven to have abused the people's power shall forfeit their right to exercise that power. Those who have usurped authority shall be forced back within the barriers of the Constitution."

Kennedy added: "Despite your adversities and oppressions, there are elements in Southern life which can help to liberate the nation." He cited the belief in the individual and the "fierce desire that people be able to shape their own destiny in their own way."

"If we can, together, surmount the injustices of the present and the divisions of the past," Kennedy said, "the Southern virtues may enrich and even save the Union."

One of the authors of the senator's prepared speech, which aides said might be shortened in delivery, was Richard Goodwin. He was a top speechwriter for the late President John F. Kennedy as well as other leading Democratic figures over the past decade.

Peterson Urges 'Liberal Influence'

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Former Democratic senatorial candidate Wallace Peterson of Lincoln has urged people who supported him to help build the Lancaster County Democratic Party as "a liberal influence in the state party."

Peterson sent letters to his supporters urging them to contribute at least $15 to the county party organization.

". . . We need to help strengthen the Lancaster County Democratic Party, for it is the most reform-minded and liberal segment of the party in Nebraska," the 1970 and 1972 senatorial candidate wrote.

'Small But Effective'

A financial contribution to the local party is "one small but effective way in which you can show your approval of our liberal and progressive force in Nebraska," Peterson said.

Peterson also urged his supporters to "continue to work for liberal candidates and to get them nominated."

Because of the vote in last year's presidential election, he noted, Lancaster County's relative strength at the 1974 Democratic state convention will be enhanced.

". . . Because we want our voices heard as a liberal influence in the state party, the most effective way we can proceed is to strengthen these positive tendencies in our local party," he said.

'Wealth, Power'

Peterson also pointed to what he described as his increasing concern over "the growing concentration of wealth and power in fewer and fewer hands in our country," resulting in "a federal tax system riddled with loopholes and privileges that benefit persons and families of great wealth.

"One of the reasons I ran for the U.S. Senate last year was to try and change some of these injustices," the chairman of the University of Nebraska Department of Economics noted.

"We did not win, but the struggle must go on.

"Our tax laws are made in the Congress and they will be changed by the Congress.

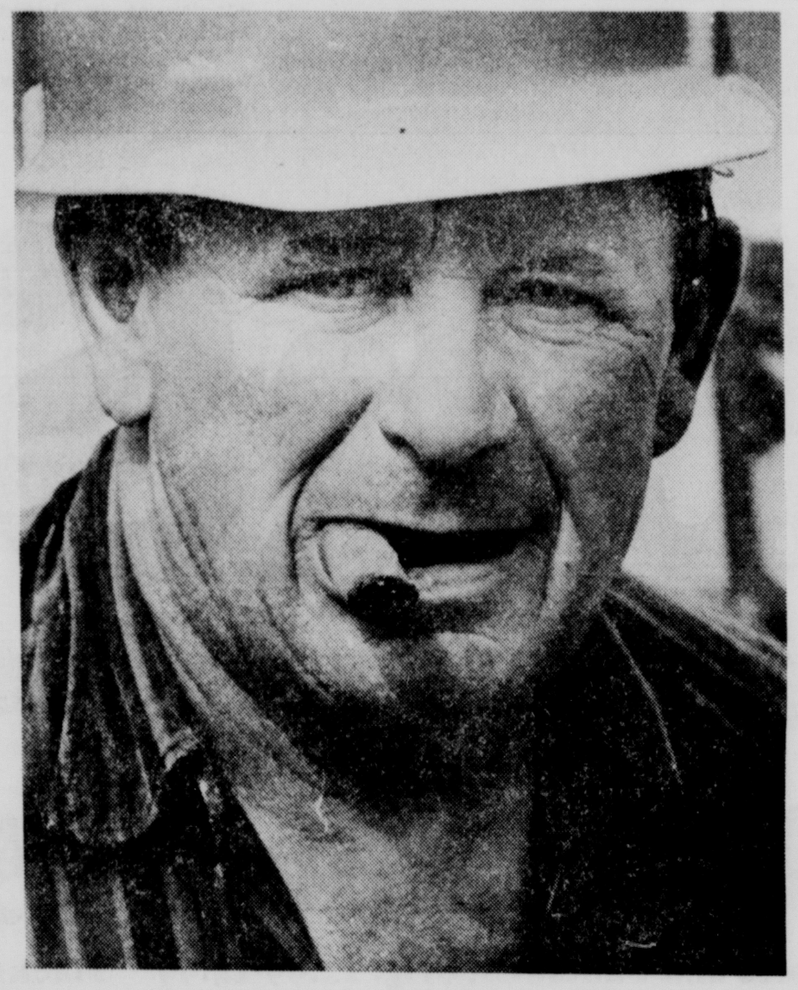

'Honest Reform'

"They will be changed when we get men and women in the Congress who truly believe in honest and fair tax reform. None of Nebraska's present congressional delegation fits that category."

Peterson said "basic democratic institutions are threatened when millions of citizens are unfairly treated.

"Our nation is now being wracked by the scandals emerging from the unsavory and contemptible Watergate business," Peterson wrote.

"I believe that this kind of dirty business is related to the fact that we have excessive concentration of wealth and power in our nation, that elections far too frequently are won by those whose campaigns are financed by special interests, and these self-same special interests expect — and get — their payoff in tax breaks."

And He Said . . .

When the photographer was shooting pictures of work on the new Home Economics Building at the University of Nebraska's East Campus, bricklayer Jim Hempel said, "Put me on Page One." So we did.

David K. Gottlieb Dies; Headed Lee Enterprises

. . . Iowan Was Director Of Journal-Star Co.

David K. Gottlieb, 59, president of Lee Enterprises, Inc., headquartered in Davenport, Iowa, and a director of the Journal-Star Printing Co. of Lincoln, died early Wednesday at his home in Davenport, apparently of a heart attack.

Mr. Gottlieb, who was nationally known in the field of newspaper research, had headed Lee Enterprises since 1970. The firm operates 14 daily newspapers in the Midwest, Montana and Oregon and six broadcast facilities.

The Lee corporation is one of the owners of the Journal-Star Printing Co., and Lee, through its Lincoln Star division, provides the news and editorial content of The Star.

Regarded as one of the foremost experts in the country in the field of research and development in newspaper production, Mr. Gottlieb had since 1971 been president of the American Newspaper Publisher's Association Research Institute.

In July of 1972 he initiated a joint venture of Lee with the Nippon Paint Co. of Osaka, Japan, to manufacture and distribute an advanced photopolymer plate for the printing industry of North America.

David K. Gottlieb

Mr. Gottlieb was a graduate of Ohio State University and became advertising manager of the Kewanee, Ill., Star-Courier, a Lee paper, in 1936.

In 1940 he became associated with the advertising department of the Davenport Daily Times.

In World War II he saw service with the U.S. Navy, and the destroyer on which he served once captured a German submarine at sea.

Mr. Gottlieb became advertising manager of the Daily Times in Davenport after the war, and in 1951 was named business manager of the Davenport Newspapers.

He served in that capacity until leaving to devote his full time to the Lee executive office in Davenport.

He served Lee as vice president and general manager before being named president three years ago.

In Davenport, Gottlieb was active in civic affairs.

Surviving, in addition to his wife, the former Elaine Hirsch, are two sons, Richard of Madison, Wis., and Robert of Boston; a daughter, Jeanne, of Boston; two sisters, Mrs. Leonard Wolen of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. Lewis Basch of Toledo, Ohio, and his mother, Mrs. A. L. Syverud of Pleasant Valley, Iowa.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Friday at Trinity Cathedral in Davenport.

Seward Lauds Ex-POW Rivers

By DICK HOLMAN
Outstate Bureau

Seward — "I can't think of anyplace else I'd rather spend my first Fourth of July in freedom than right here in my own hometown," said Navy Capt. Wendell B. Rivers.

The 44-year-old aviator, a prisoner of war in Hanoi for seven years and five months, was here Wednesday to celebrate Nebraska's Fourth of July City festivities.

"It's pretty nice to come home" after a 27-year absence, Rivers said in an interview. The son of a mail carrier, Rivers was born and raised in Seward and formerly lived in Pleasant Dale.

"You never detach yourself from where you were born and where you grew up," he said.

Community members lauded him as Seward's hero of the day. But he modestly denied having done anything exceptional in his POW status. "I did what anyone else would have done in that situation."

Asked if things in his hometown had changed much, he replied, "No, it's the same old place and the same old people."

Treated "Wonderfully'

The civilian people of North Vietnam who first captured him in 1965 near Vinh treated him "wonderfully," he said, offering him cigarettes, tea, water and food. "There was no physical abuse."

But when he passed into the control of the North Vietnamese Army, "the treatment worsened," he said.

Most of the torture was conducted to elicit propaganda statements, he said.

The gray, soft-spoken A4E flyer recalled that "by summer 1966, all new arrivals were being tortured." That continued through 1969, he said, then Ho Chi Minh died and conditions began to improve.

No Written Materials

Yet he said, even then, he still suffered solitary confinement and was allowed no reading, writing or study materials.

Later on, he said 30 or 40 men were allowed to share a barracks, and he and his fellow prisoners relied on each other for self-education.

Asked if he ever gave up hope, Rivers said, "From the very beginning, all of us were convinced that some day we would all come home.

"As the years went by, that feeling became stronger," even though many envisioned their imprisonment might last 10 or 20 years, he said.

'Morale Shattered'

"Personally, the only time during the entire stay that my morale was shattered somewhat was five days before the (1972) presidential election."

He said that was when President Nixon stopped the air war over North Vietnam "without action to take us out."

Rivers was released on Feb. 12, 1973, and arrived on the second plane of prisoners freed.

"Nothing could beat that feeling," he smiled, recalling when the freedom plane lifted off the runway at Hanoi.

"I have not made a decision whether to continue in the Navy or whether to retire," Rivers said. He has served 27 years.

Young Black Unemployment Rates At 'Disaster Levels'

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Unemployment rates among young black people "have now reached disaster levels" the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people was told at its annual convention here Wednesday.

Herbert Hill, NAACP national labor director, said in a report to the convention:

"If they - unemployment rates - continue and, unfortunately, there is every reason to believe they will, then it is necessary to conclude that virtually an entire generation of ghetto youth will never enter into the labor force."

Hill said research of government reports indicated more than 50 per cent of black ghetto youth will be unemployed by the end of this summer. He called it the "the worst situation since the great depression."

"This development is the single most explosive factor in causing urban unrest and has dangerous implications for every city and suburb in the United States," Hill said. "Benign neglect has now become criminal complicity."

Hill said, "An endless st.eam of Madison Avenue hucksters, some of them masquerading as 'civil rights leaders,' periodically issue press releases and hold news conferences in which they announce great progress for blacks in the building trades unions."

"The fact that the overwhelming majority blacks and members of other minority groups working in the building trades are excluded from the high-paying craft unions was confirmed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which revealed statistics based upon reports from referral unions," Hill said.

German Urges Freer Movement

HELSINKI (AP) — Foreign Minister Walter Scheel of West Germany urged the European security conference on Wednesday to open gateways for freer movement of people and ideas across national boundaries.

"There is a great hunger for information," he said in the first policy address by a major Western government to the 35-nation conference.

Specifically, Scheel appealed for a right of journalists to travel and file dispatches without censorship and other restraints imposed upon them in Communist countries.

At the same time, he proposed that families divided by the cold war be permitted to reunite, taking their property and other belongings with them.

Scheel thus advanced one of the West's principal aims. He received strong support from Canadian Foreign Minister Mitchell Sharp, who said the question of human contacts is, in many ways, "the touchstone of the success of the conference."

The United States, West Germany, Canada, Denmark and others are expected to press these points when working committees meet in Geneva in mid-September to begin preparing final declarations.

By contrast, Foreign Minister Otto Winzer of East Germany, making his nation's speaking debut at a major international gathering, warned that the Communists would not permit a free inflow of ideas it deemed to be "antihumanistic."

Winzer did not elaborate.

The Soviet Union, in a new declaration circulated among all the delegations, gave only passing notice to "contacts between organizations and persons."

Instead, the Soviets stressed their call for Western recognition of the boundaries of the Communist states in Eastern Europe.

In the New Soviet declaration Moscow proposed that all states promise not to intervene in the internal affairs of other states and to recognize the right of all people to choose their own form of government.

The provision would not deter the use of Soviet troops to bring Communist regimes into line as in Czechoslovakia in 1968, a Soviet spokesman said.

Banking Relations Set

Hong Kong — The Chase Manhattan Bank will act as a correspondent of the Bank of China in the United States, David Rockefeller, chairman of Chase Manhattan, announced after a 10-day visit to China. The activities of Chase Manhattan, the first bank to establish such relations with China since the Communists came to power in 1949, will be limited until the United States and China settle financial claims arising from the Communist takeover and subsequent American action.

Saigon Settling Land

Saigon — In an apparent effort to lay definite claim to as much territory as possible before clear lines of control are drawn, the Saigon government has accelerated its program to resettle tens of thousands of refugees into vast stretches of no-mans land. Although the Viet Cong move freely through these areas, the Saigon government and most American officials believe they are not exposing the refugees to excessive danger.

Daughter Says Nixon Considered Resigning Because Of Watergate

AP

JULIE NIXON EISENHOWER

San Clemente, Calif. (AP) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower says her father considered resigning because of the Watergate scandal and asked the family's advice on the question.

"We said no," Julie reported, "because resigning would have been an admission of wrongdoing. And we also felt that he was the man for the job. He had started things and needed to finish them."

The President's younger daughter observes her 25th birthday Thursday. She is celebrating here with her family at the Western White House.

In an interview, Julie said the discussions took place at Camp David on the weekend after President Nixon made his April 30 radio television speech on the Watergate affair. At that time he announced the resignations of his two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Erlichman, and the firing of his counsel, John W. Dean III.

She said Nixon played "devil's advocate." Julie said her father "who loves this country and would do anything for it," raised the question of resignation and whether it would be better for the country and help heal the wounds faster.

Julie said she believes that "events are going to vindicate" the President and expressed concern over the "negative atmosphere" created by Watergate.

She defended her father, as she has in a series of public appearances in recent months, saying "I think he was just really in the dark" about the burglary of the Democratic National Committee and the subsequent coverup.

Julie said her father failed to discover something was wrong months ago because "he just had complete faith in everyone around him. I guess that's part of the whole tragedy of this thing."

Nixon's problems came because he didn't run his own campaign in 1972, Julie said.

"He didn't keep close tabs on the whole thing," he said. "One of the real tragedies of Watergate is that the dampaign organization is getting a black eye" and so many good, ahrd working people "are brought down too," she added.

Julie said she decided to continue her busy schedule despite Watergate because she wants to be part of her father's administration and talk about his programs.

Julie said her father's mood at the Western White House was "very good ... He's moving ahead." Nixon has been able to get in some swimming and walking on the beach with his family while here.

The President took the family on a nostalgic drive a few days ago to nearby Dana Point, where he proposed to Pat Nixon, Julie said.

She said the idea of a political enemy list is "so ludicrous . . . because everyone knows who's opposed to the administration and who's a friend. Writing about this just makes it sound so underhanded. I just don't feel it's fair representation because I know my father and the kind of man he is. And he's not that way. He's too busy to be consumed with petty paranoid concerns."

Responding to criticism over government expenditures of some $1.3 million on Nixon's California and Florida homes, Julie said other presidents had similar amounts spent on their homes.

World News

"President Kennedy had three homes and I'm sure that must have added up to more," she said.

Julie said her parents are "so ethical." She added: "I just don't like to see anything written that implies that they would have personal gain, because they just aren't that way. When my dad left Washington in 1960-61, he left with about the same thing he came in with. He didn't make a lot of money in government."

Julie said she thinks the press and the American people "should be disturbed at the whole idea of burglary and coverup."

"What disturbs me greatly," said the President's daughter, is that "the press made a hero of Daniel Ellsberg. He stole documents. It was a question of national security and that could have much greater consequences than bugging the Democratic National headquarters. . ."

"What's really sad is that Watergate in a way is the result of government being so big, so much power in the presidency. Government gets bigger and bigger. But this administration did try to really make a start . . . This administration has really, sincerely tried to make government less centralized, less powerful." As examples of the effort, Julie cited Nixon's revenue-sharing proposals and attempts to move more decision making to the state and local levels.

Julie reported some of the lighter side of the Nixon family.

She told how they got real delight out of Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev's visit to their San Clemente home. "We all got in and tested Tricia's bed after Brezhnev slept there" and now consider it "really very historical."

Julie was born in Washington, July 5, 1948, during her father's first term in Congress.

Since her marriage to President Dwight D. Eisenhower's grandson, David, in December 1968, Julie notes she has moved six times.

Now she's finding it "really peaceful" living in Bethesda, Mi., home they rent from Nixon's close Florida friend C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo. Julie became irritated when she was asked how much rent they pay in view of reports it is much less than the $125,000 home could command.

"That's part of my private business," she said.

Wounded Knee Church Burns

Wounded Knee, S.D. (UPI) — The white, high-spired Roman Catholic church which became a symbol of the 71-day occupation of Wounded Knee burned to the ground late Tuesday night. Indian police said Wednesday arson was suspected.

Del Eastman, special officer in charge of Indian police on the Pine Ridge Oglala Sioux Reservation, said FBI agents had joined in the investigation of the fire.

The Sacred Heart Chruch stood on a hill overlooking the hamlet where militant Indians and their supporters defied hundreds of FBI men and U.S. marshals during the occupation from Feb. 28 to May 8.

The church appeared in thousands of news pictures and telecasts of the Indian uprising in which two of the occupiers were killed and two federal officers were wounded.

The wooden church was used as sleeping quarters and as a storage area by members of the American Indian Movement (AIM) during their holdout to dramatize demands for recognition of Indian treaty rights and reform on the Pine Ridge reservation.

It stood overlooking the creek bed where, in 1890, between 200 and 300 Sioux and Cheyenne died in the "Massacre of Wounded Knee" — the last encounter between the Plains Indians and the U.S. cavalry.

The massacre victims, along with cavalrymen slain in the encounter, lie buried in a mass grave directly behind the church site.

A priest on the reservation said it appeared the church had been broken into before Tuesday night's fire. But this was not unusual, he said. Breakins occurred several times each week.

Diplomacy Behind Bombing Increase

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — American officials here say the recent sharp increase in U.S. bombing in Cambodia is designed to convince the Communist-led insurgents that they cannot win a total military victory.

The air strikes are said to be delivering that message to the rebels and their North Vietnamese allies in the knowledge that a clear-cut victory for the U.S.-backed Phnom Penh regime is equally impossible.

The military situation in Cambodia remains serious, but no more so than in the last few weeks. The observers thus interpret the bombing increase as a diplomatic tool in President Nixon's efforts to negotiate a Cambodian cease-fire.

Officials here believe the United States is seeking to persuade China and North Vietnam to cut off ammunition and other war supplies to the insurgents and thus force them to the negotiating table.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, titular head of the insurgents, has expressed serious concern at such a possibility.

To ease the way for negotiations, Washington also is believed seeking to "neutralize" Cambodia's ailing President Lon Nol by getting him to the United States ostensibly for medical treatment. Lon Nol suffered a stroke two years ago that left him partially paralyzed.

His removal from power is one of the insurgents' major demands.

Premier In Tam confirmed Wednesday that Lon Nol's visit to the United States is coming up. But he said a decision on the date will be made by the president's doctors.

In signing legislation to cut off funds for American bombing in Cambodia after Aug. 15, Nixon said "delicate negotiations" aimed at a peace settlement were under way.

In Tam claimed in an interview that if negotiations are proceeding, it is without knowledge or participation of the Phnom Penh government.

He added that talks between Phnom Penh and Sihanouk were "impossible."

The ebullient prince offered last year and again in February to talk peace directly with the United States, but Washington turned him down. Officials in Phnom Penh now concede that Sihanouk will play at least a "ceremonial role" in any peace agreement.

Against this the backdrop of prospective negotiations, the Defense Department reported this week in Washington that tactical strikes by U.S. fighters were numbering "in the 200s" every day.

The former daily average was about 150 missions a day. Spokesman William Beecher said B52 bombers continue making about 40 strikes a day. He attributed the stepped up fighter raids to improved weather conditions and increased attacks by rebel forces.

White House sources reported Wednesday that Henry A. Kissinger will meet later this month or in early August with Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai in Peking.

Speculation that the Peking meeting will focus on a settlement of the fighting in Cambodia was not discouraged by the White House, and Kissinger was expected to meet with Sihanouk.

Sihanouk has headed a Cambodian government in exile in the old French legation compound in Peking since his overthrow by Lon Nol in 1970. He returned to Peking Wednesday from a tour of Africa and Eastern Europe.

Nixon's Setter Almost Drowns

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon's Irish setter, "King Timahoe," had a bit of a sticky time of it during a recent romp. Julie Nixon Eisenhower recalled it as a "really exciting episode."

The President's daughter said the pooch blundered into a marshy area near the beach where "he got tangled up . . . and started to kind of drown." Julie told an interviewer that Nixon family friend, C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo, visiting from Florida, "had to wade in and save him."

Fighting Is Heavy On Three Fronts

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodian insurgents engaged government troops in heavy fighting Wednesday on three fronts — west, northwest and south of Phnom Penh.

U.S. Air Force tactical bombers and fighter jets flew massive strikes from bases in Thailand throughout the day.

Field reporters who visited all three fronts said the heaviest air activity was concentrated around Prek Phdau village 20 miles west of the capital on Highway 4, leading to the seaport of Kompong Som. Intense ground fighting was only six miles from the city's southern edge.

Reporters said American F111 fighter-bombers, A7 Corsairs and F4 Phantoms struck in relays against suspected and known insurgent positions both near and inside Prek Phdau village.

Some 300 insurgents overran Prek Phdau Tuesday night after forcing out a company of government soldiers with a tear gas barrage. Wednesday they overran Kev Odam village one mile to the east and encircled a company-size unit guarding a bridge one mile west at the village of O Ambal.

Rebel occupation of a two-mile stretch of Highway 4 between Kev Odam and O Ambal left the capital with only one major overland supply line, Route 5, to the northwest rice bowl in Battambang Province.

On rural Route 3, which links southbound major Highways 2 and 3, the field reporter said 17 government soldiers died and 14 were wounded Wednesday as foot soldiers made an apparently futile, half-mile drive, exchanged fire with the insurgents and then pulled back to their original position.

Display Opens On Independence Day At National Gallery . . .

Exhibit Depicts Blacks' Roles In Revolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first exhibition of national significance devoted to the role of blacks in the American Revolutionary War period opened on Independence Day at the National Portrait Gallery.

On July 4, 1776, the population of the colonies was about 2½ million. About half a million of these were blacks, nearly all of them slaves.

For them, there came new hope for freedom with the winning of independence and the founding of a new nation dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. It proved to be a hope which would be frustrated at least until the Civil War.

The exhibition, titled "The Black Presence in the Era of the American Revolution 1770-1800," includes many paintings and objects never publicly displayed before.

There are some 250 items — portraits, prints, broadsides, petitions, poems, letters and a variety of related objects — which have been assembled from public and private collections throughout the country.

Marvin Sadik, director of the Portrait Gallery, which is a branch of the Smithsonian Institution, says the hope is that "this exhibition will help restore to national memory the fact of black participation in the events that shaped the founding of this country."

The exhibition is scheduled to remain on view through Sept. 3.

It is accompanied by a handsome 250-page catalogue and monograph by Prof. Sidney Kaplan, who with Sadik planned the exhibition. The volume, containing more than 100 illustrations, will be published in the fall by the New York Graphic Society in a hard-cover edition.

A soft-cover edition is now on sale at the gallery. The monograph is the first scholarly treatment of black participation in the Revolutionary era. Kaplan, a recognized scholar of black history, is professor of English at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and teaches in the DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies.

The exhibition occupies most of the Portrait Gallery's first floor, with late 18th century architectural detail. A portion devoted to the black clergy is designed to resemble the interior of an early church, with planked floor, altar rail, and a reproduction of a stained glass window portrait of the Rev. Andrew Bryan.

On display is the original pulpit built by the Rev. Richard Allen in the early 19th century and lent by the Mother Bethel A.M.E. Church of Philadelphia.

The exhibit includes many petitions, court actions and other documents with which Negroes sought to gain their freedom in the wake of the successful revolution.

Thousands did gain freedom, either through service in the Continental Army or from masters who could not reconcile slavery with the revolutionary concepts of freedom and liberty. By 1780, there were about 59,000 free blacks; 10 years later the number was nearly doubled.

There were three all-black units in the Continental Army and a fourth which voyaged from Haiti with the French. The Tories, too, wooed many blacks to fight with them. The Earl of Dunmore, royal governor of Virginia, issued a proclamation in 1775 declaring "all indented servants, Negroes, or other (appertaining to Rebels) free that are able and willing to bear arms" in the king's cause.

The exhibition includes Paul Revere's famous print of the Boston Massacre, showing Crispus Attucks, a runaway slave from Framingham, Mass., as he became the first martyr of the American Revolution.

There is a 1786 oil study of Peter Salem with Lt. Grosvenor for "The Battle of Bunker Hill" painted by John Trumbull. Salem fought at Lexington and was a hero at Bunker Hill, for which he was presented to Gen. George Washington for "having slain Pitcairn," a British commander.

There is a silk flag presented to the "Bucks of America," Boston's all-black unit, after the war by John Hancock as "a tribute to their courage and devotion throughout the struggle."

There is a portrait of Paul Cuffe, a shipbuilder and sea captain who, at the age of 21, petitioned the Massachusetts legislature to relieve Negroes from paying taxes since they had "no vote or influence in the election of those who tax us."

A recently restored oil portrait, narrowly rescued from oblivion, is a likeness of the Rev. Absolom Jones painted by Raphaelle Peale in 1810.

Jones was co-founder with Richard Allen of the Free African Society, and the first ordained black Episcopal priest in the United States.

The painting was tracked down in a drawer at the Wintherthur Museum in Delaware, where it had been sent for restoration after hanging for years in deteriorating condition in the Absolom Jones Junior High School in Wilmington.

An early 19th century tray depictythe Rev. Lemuel Haynes preaching to his congregation. A Congregationalist, Haynes was probably the first black to preach regularly to a white congregation. He had been a minuteman from Granville, Mass.

There is a reproduction of a stained glass window of the Rev. Andrew Bryan, who became minister of the Ethiopian Church of Jesus Christ in Savannah, Ga., in 1788.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

(Note: William O. Dobler, The Star's editor, is on vacation. Today's column is by humorist Phyllis Battelle.)

NEW YORK — For at least two decades, scientists and sociologists and environmentalists and promoters have been predicting what American life will be like in 2,000 A.D. In that period of time, as they say in the Watergate hearings, life will be innovative (scientists), crowded and hungry (sociologists), scarcely worth living (environmentalists) and fantastically convenient (promoters).

Weighing the pros against the cons for that magical year, it sounded like a good time to visit, but I wouldn't want to live then.

Today I received the latest prognostication from the Stanford Research Institute, one of those "think tanks" that have become so popular since students began graduating with Ph.D.'s and finding they couldn't get more lucrative jobs.

Stanford has crystal-balled coming engineering marvels, and present consumer tastes, and says that just 27 years from now:

— A good segment of the U.S. population will be driving plastic cars.

— They also will be living in plastic houses.

— Eating and relaxing with plastic furniture.

— And in some parts of the land, they will live in cities covered by a clear plastic dome.

This prediction doubtless will delight the plastic promoters, may bore the sociologists, possibly will interest the scientists, and likely will appall the environmentalists — since plastics are widely believed to be highly indestructible as solid waste materials. (But Stanford says never fear; the environmental problems regarding plastics will be minimal by that time. And besides, who's going to throw a house, a city "environment cover" or even many used cars on the garbage heap?)

The projected figures indicate that tomorrow's autos will have enough plastic in them to cut the total average weight of a car from today's 4,000 pounds to a weight of about 2,000. Most components, including gas tanks, structural frames and even axles and entire engines will be plastic rather than metal.

Already, the experts say, over 150 pounds of today's typical car is plastic: dashboards, seat covers, mouldings, grilles, air-conditioning and heating ducts, distributor caps and other vital parts.

"The plastics revolution," reports Stanford, "has been spurred by numerous factors. First, engineers find that producing plastic parts is as simple as cooking from a recipe." Polymer chemists today can take any of the 40 different families of plastics and, blending them with other elements to change their characteristics, come up with "virtually any material needed."

More important, Stanford researchers say that plastics can be made by utilizing far less of our natural resources than is required in the energy conversion processes needed to form other materials. And this, they note, is a key factor in coping with the nergy crisis. "Not only will less energy be used in making auto parts, but the end-products are lighter in weight, permitting them to consume less energy in daily use."

About the plastic houses: Fiber-reinforced plastics will be used for beams; polycarbonate windows, which resist breaking or scratching, will be important factors; plastic insulating materials could provide properties that builders just cannot get from othr materials; window frames, piping and plumbing fixtures of plastic would make housing less expensive than todav's traditional construction details.

Domed cities "may" be a thing of the future "if scientists find they can enclose the environment and provide adequate air-conditioning to make it livable the year round." We already have plastic-domed stadiums, and in the near future will have domed shopping centers and malls. The city-cover is an extension — albeit a tricky and costly one.

According to the "think tank" figures, the uses of plastic will increase at a rate of nearly nine per cent each year between now and 2.000 . . . from today's 10 million metric tons to a projected total of 103 million. Even the crystal balls may be made of lucite, mounted of course on a fiberglass base.

Skyjackings Falling Off As Security Irritates Passengers

Washington — In 1972 there were 31 reported skyjacking attempts in the United States, 10 of which were successful. So far in 1973, there have been two attempts, neither successful. The dramatic decline in air piracy stems from a presidential order which took effect just six months ago, on Jan. 5. As of that date, the nation's 531 airports serving scheduled air carriers were required to (1) screen all boarding passengers by metal-detection devices and (2) inspect all carry-on items that would be accessible to passengers during the flight.

Six weeks later, on Feb. 15, Secretary of State William P. Rogers announced that the United States and Cuba had signed a "memorandum of understanding" on the hijacking of aircraft and seagoing vessels. The agreement had the effect of placing Cuba off-bounds as a refuge for American hijackers.

So now air travel is presumably safer — though considerably more inconvenient. Because of the screening regulations, airline passengers must arrive at the terminal well in advance of departure time to make sure they make their flights.

Most passengers, mindful of past skyjackings, have resigned themselves to the pre-boarding searches. But not all. Last January, Sen. Vance Hartke (D Ind.) refused to submit to a personal search on the ground of congressional immunity. The two airlines which allowed Hartke to board their planes on his terms were later fined $500 apiece by the Federal Aviation Administration.

If the anti-hijacking campaign continues to be effective, rebellious acts like Sen. Hartke's may become more common. Most people are willing to endure a certain loss of privacy as long as air piracy poses an immediate threat. But once the threat recedes, as it now appears to be, impatience is likely to grow. Several airlines report that increasing numbers of business travelers are complaining about the security precautions.

The metal-detection devices now in use are a major source of annoyance. Their function is to detect such dangerous weapons as guns and knives. But they also have sounded a warning signal when confronted by metal foil on cigarette packages, metallic credit cards, and wire-enforced brassiers and corsets. One New York girl repeatedly flunked the magnetometer test at Kennedy International Airport until it was learned that her orthodontic braces triggered the alarm.

His Own Worst Enemy

Death Of Dave Gottlieb

Indirectly, a great many people of Lincoln and of Nebraska knew David K. Gottlieb of Davenport, Ia., who died this week. As president of Lee Enterprises, Inc., they may not have known him but they have known him through his influence upon the Lincoln newspapers, and especially upon The Lincoln Star.

For many years, The Star has been a Lee newspaper, combined in its business affairs with The Lincoln Evening Journal but independent in its editorial affairs. Not only have The Journal and The Star been independent of one another editorially, but The Star has been independent editorially within Lee Enterprises.

That is a major part of the contribution that Mr. Gottieb made to The Star and its readers. As did his precessors before him, Mr. Gottlieb believed that a sound newspaper from a business point of view was one that had an independent editorial voice and a news product of quality and integrity.

Thus, The Lincoln Star and the other newspaper properties held by Lee have always been urged to be a strong voice in their community. Their affiliation with Lee was never a factor with them in their news and editorial judgment, giving them freedom to play the news and to editorialize as the local editor saw fit.

Even on the local scene, Lee policy has been to maintain news and editorial content in the hands of the editor as opposed to the publisher or business manager.

Thus, Mr. Gottlieb has contributed to as vigorous and unfettered a newspaper in Lincoln as those in charge of it locally have had the ability to deliver. Beyond this, he was an influencial member of the news and broadcast media on the national scene.

Finally, he was a warm and considerate human being who will be greatly missed by all those who knew him.

One Major Problem

The Republicans could never have done as much damage to the Democrats through political espionage as the Democrats did to themselves in 1972 as a result of internal dissention, alienation of traditional party components such as labor and the apportioning of convention delegates by the so-called quota system. Sen. Hubert Humphrey said last week.

We don't think that the absence of either GOP spying (if it had gone undetected) or the delegate battles would have salvaged the election for George McGovern and the Democrats last year.

But the former vice president and Democratic presidential standard bearer's comments do point out what will be the party's major problem in the otherwise promising political seasons of 1974 and 1976.

The Democrats don't have to come to grips with the quota system question immediately. They must, however, attempt in other ways to create some sense of order in their house in advance of the off-year congressional elections, if the results are to be as fruitful as now looks possible.

Of more importance, though, looking past 1974 to 1976, is the solution to the delegate selection problem. Put another way, how democratic will the Democratic Party be?

If the party turns its back on the reform which sought to insure more representation in party affairs for women and minorities, it may alienate as many people as it did by going to the quota system at the convention which nominated McGovern. The party is stuck with the difficult task of constructing a formula which will make women and minority people participants in the political process — in policy making and nominating candidates — but at the same time not excluding those old powerful forces who had a quality the new breed of Democratic politicians seems to lack, the ability to win the big elections.

If the Democratic Party can resolve that major problem, it should recover as quickly from its 1972 disaster as the GOP rebounded from the Goldwater debacle of 1964.

TOM WICKER

Mr. Colson Throws A Curve

NEW YORK — Anything Charles Colson wants to happen immediately, it is safe to assume, would be good for (A) Richard Nixon and (B) Charles Colson, maybe even in that order. So let us look again at Colson's assertion in a Sunday television interview that the most important thing in the Watergate matter is for "the American people to know immediately" whether Nixon was involved in the June 17, 1972, break-in at the Democratic National Committee offices and its subsequent coverup.

Of course, Colson insists Nixon was not so involved and appears to suggest that therefore the President can be absolved of any responsibility for matters now coming to light. This tricky approach is entirely worthy of Colson.

For one thing, even the single event of the June 17 break-in at the Democratic National Committee was not an obscure or short-lived episode. Suppose Nixon knew nothing of it before it happened; suppose that as late as the night of March 21, 1973, as Colson insisted Sunday, Nixon was complaining that "he was not being told the truth." Accepting both assertions for the purposes of argument, Nixon had had by the latter date nine months to find out the truth — nine months for investigation by his own Justice Department, his own appointee as head of the FBI, his own legal counsel (as Nixon told the nation), his own staff; and nine months, too, of political charges, journalistic exposes, a federal court trial, and the initiation of two congressional investigations, one of them lobbied off the board by White House Aides.

Yet, for those nine months, Colson would have us believe, the President of the United Staes — who has been repeatedly pictured as knowing "all the facts," more facts than anyone else, on Vietnam, Cambodia and all the trouble spots of the world — was kept from the truth under his own nose by the wily machinations of evil John W. Dean 3d. If Richard Nixon in fact passed those nine months without learning, or strongly suspecting to the point of insisting on learning, that the break-in was the work of men hired in his name and on his behalf, then he did not want to know and there is a prima facie case of neglect of duty to be brought against him, with Charles Colson as a principal witness for the prosecution.

The June 17 break-in, moreover, was only the tip of the iceberg. Try as Colson and others might to narrow the inquiry to the limited questions of whether Nixon knew of it in advance, and-or helped to cover it up afterwards, the rest of the iceberg is still there beneath the oily surface. What about the Ellsberg break-in, the illegal wiretapping of-reporters, the list of "enemies" to be "screwed," the forgery of tables, the secret police activities of teh Liddy-Hunt "plumbers" group who were moved from Richard Nixon's White House to Richard Nixon's Re-Election Committee, the attempts to pervert the FBI, the CIA, and the Internal Revenue Service into political henchmen of the administration, Nixon's admitted approval of the infamous and illegal 1970 internal security plan and his participation in improper approaches to Judge Byrne during the Ellsberg trial? Innocence of the June 17 break-in and its coverup is not necessarily innocence of these other offenses.

Nor is it an acceptable defense, even if true, to say that the President knew nothing of any of this, or didn't understand its implications, or acted — in the case of the internal security plan — only to uphold "national security." What kind of security is there for anyone if the chief executive of the country is himself ordering burglaries to be committed? If the highest national official, who is sworn to uphold the law, doesn't know that his own men are breaking the law, and is too inept to find out, or doesn't understand what law-breaking is, he is palpably unfit for his office.

Finally, although the guilty persons must be punished, even if they include Nixon, there are other perhaps more important aspects to the present crisis than individual guilt or innocence. What structural weaknesses and political failures permitted the offenders to abuse powers supposedly checked and balanced, and to pervert laws and agencies to illicit purposes? What can be done, not just to punish the presently guilty, but to deter and tie the hands of those who might be tempted in the future?

How should elections be financed and supervised? What relationship should the FBI have to the White House? Should a federal crime investigating agency also have the mission of counterespionage, with its inevitable political surveillance tactics? Is the CIA's department of "dirty tricks" any longer needed in an era of good feeling with China and bearhugs with Brezhnev? What, if anything, can be done to break down presidential secrecy and make the White House more accountable to the people between elections?

All these and many questions transcend the admittedly important matter of Richard Nixon's personal guilt or innocence. And even that question is far more than a matter of what he specifically knew about the June 17 break-in, before or after his agents pulled it off.

LA VERNA HASSLER

Patchwork Prairie Country

I feel rather smug about my work early this morning as I sit down to write. I have the over going in the kitchen as I seldom do in the summertime unless it is early in the morning. Two cherry pies are baking, along with a chocolate cake. Two potatoes will be put in later along with some beef short ribs. If my enthusiasm holds, I may add a barbecue sauce.

The Farmer has already been to our town and is now putting the barrels back on the tractor in preparation for applying spray to the corn field for root worm. As the saying goes, everything is coming up roses. . .that is at the moment. Before the day ends, something is bound to happen. At the busiest time of the year, things seem to go wrong. A piece of machinery needs repairs, a truck tire goes down, the car balks and when we had livestock, they found this an opportune time to stretch through the fence and get away from the herd. When we baled hay, it always seemed the baler broke down in our field.

Perhaps one would think I am a pessimist but it is an old story to every farmer. . .just as one is the busiest, striving to get all the tasks done that need to be done, some ornery trick of fate puts the thorns back on the rose.

The little dog that has made his home with us for a month or more met with an accident. He was killed at the end of our lane by a car.

For some reason, we have never been able to keep a dog. They have all been killed by cars. We never were enthused by this little dog for as The Farmer said, "We won't have him long but while we do, he'll keep us entertained and busy trying to keep him out of trouble," which is exactly what he did.

I was aware the little dog was near me as I watered the ferns last evening for I saw him at the edge of the ferns pawing at a toad.

A few moments later a neighbor drove into the yard to tell us he had hit the dog just as he came running up out of the ditch on to the roadway. He swerved to miss him but it happened so quick he could not avoid the accident.

I was glad to know he kept the vehicle under control and did not himself end up in the ditch. To my way of thinking, no dog is worth the price of ending up in the ditch or rolling the car over in an effort to save a dog's life.

I remember once The Farmer and I were driving down the road when suddenly a dog appeared. Like all instant decisions, we swerved to miss the dog and hit the loose gravel. It took some quick thinking on the part of The Farmer to keep us on the road.

No one wants to hit a dog or any other small creature but there are times when it is unavoidable. Come next spring I suppose someone else will dump another dog or cats on our road. They do each spring and it seems our place has come to be a sort of stopping-off place for wayward animals. Cats usually migrate away from our place after a short while, living in the buildings up at the other place on the hill or perhaps traveling to the neighbors.

Just at the crack of dawn, the birds in the trees about our farm almost sing their heart out before they have had a chance to decide whether they are going to have a good day or not. I have never heard such variety of bird song as I hear these early summer mornings. After daylight they are busy feeding their young. I can hear them crying for food from the nests or in the deep grass under the trees.

Talk about troubles! A bird with a family certainly has a task trying to keep those gaping mouths filled. I hope they glean my garden well. It seems I can always find some type of creepy creature in the garden. A bug in the beak is worth two in the beets.

Martin Vacation Cut Short

WASHINGTON — While most Americans vacation at overpriced and overcrowded resorts packed next to their neighbors like coins in a pocket, a few well-connected bureaucrats are able to loll in the nation's most picturesque spots — with the taxpayers picking up most of the tab.

From the lofty vistas of the Grand Tetons to delightfully deserted stretches of beach in the Virgin Islands, bigwigs from Congress, the White House and the government departments can enjoy the national parks in style.

The National Park Service, always ready to appease the powerful, operates 10 "rest houses" where VIPs can cavort without having to worry about the high cost of living.

The big guns of the Nixon administration have shown a special affinity for Camp Hoover in the Shenandoah National Park not far from Washington. Among those who have relaxed at this sylvan retreat are Attorney General Elliot Richardson, acting FBI Director William Ruckelshaus, Deputy Budget Director Fred Malck and, on a slow weekend, Ronald Walker, who heads the park service.

Others have ventured as far as St. Johns or St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands to soak up the sun during the winter months. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist, White House telecommunications czar Clay Whitehead and Guy Simpler, an assistant to Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, are among the winter tourists who enjoy the surf and sand during the expensive season for only $10 a day. This modest fee included the services of a government-paid caretaker.

Another visitor to the islands, Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., was irritated when other VIPs on the waiting list cut short his stay after only two weeks at the waterfront haven.

At Brinkerhoff Lodge in the Grand Tetons, the bill goes up to $45 a day for the park service's most luxurious villa. But those who have stayed there find it a bargain. The price includes maid service as well as a park ranger at the bureaucrat's beck and call.

None of these quarters, of course, is available to the millions of ordinary Americans who visit the parks.

Footnote: The park service would like to close down these fancy villas if the pampered bigwigs would permit it.

Once more, the government has put a rabbit in charge of the lettuce patch. This time it's almost literally true: An insurance official who spent his life fighting federal crop insurance has been slipped in to head the federal farm insurance agency.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corp., was set up in the dust-bowl days to insure farmers against losses from dust, fire, hail and other disasters. Currently operating in the black, the little agency is a boon to farmers in more than 1,400 counties.

But the FCIA has been constantly harassed byhtwo powerful insurance industry lobbies which go by the names National Crop Insurance Council and Hail Insurance Adjustment and Research Association.

The founding father of the larger National Crop Insurance Council and an ex-president of the hail insurance trade group is a hard-line fighter against federal farm insurance named Melvin Peterson, a former executive of the Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies.

We have copies of his virulent prose as far back as 1966 seeking destruction of some of the federal farm agency programs. In 1971, he was a leader in an effort to cripple the agencyhand turn the cream of its business over to private insurers.

Now, to the surprise of farmers, Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz has named the scourge of the federal crop insurance agency as its new boss. Peterson urged us to wait until he had gotten well into his job before we wrote about him and the agency. We declined on the grounds that if we waited, there might not be any agency to write about.

The nation's militant conservationists sometimes have memories as short as their tempers. One of the Senate's most tireless fighters for the environment has been Frank Moss, D-Utah, who has sponsored every major air and water pollution bill that has passed inthe last 15 years. He has also cosponsored the Wilderness Act, the Wild Rivers Act and the Outdoor Recreation Act. Now, however, Moss has backed measures to allow a water backup from Lake Powell that will increase the water beneath Rainbow Bridge National Monument. Although it is dubious that the water would structurally damage the bridge, Moss is being nastily attacked by some of his fair-weather friends in the environmental movement.

The American Medical Association, whose journal draws heavy income from drug ads and whose pension fund has $10 million in drug stocks, has refused an ad for a guide to drug prices.

The book, "Physician's Guide to Prescription Prices," gives doctors and consumers comparative costs of drugs. The drug firms that advertise in the AMA Journal oppose comparative pricing because it helps doctors prescribe safe, inexpensive drugs instead of the same product sold with fancy trade names at fancyhprices.

In trying to explain why it turned down the ad, the AMA told the book's publishers "we would not presume to encourage efforts to 'fix' prices . . . " Actually, by refusing the ad, the AMA has done just that: Comparative pricing is one way to stop price fixing.

Africa Losing Treasures To Private Art Collectors

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Most of Africa's cultural treasures were plundered in colonial days, but the few leftovers still support a booming trade in stolen art objects.

Museums and private collectors in Europe and the United States hold large exhibitions of African antiquities — while museums in Africa are virtually bare.

"These are replicas," explained a guide at the ancient museum of Abomey in northern Dahomey. He pointed to dusty tapestries on the wall. "All the originals were taken to Paris years ago."

Most of the exhibits at the tiny museum of Benin, Nigeria, once the center of a great empire famous for its work in bronze, are also replicas. Many of the originals are in London.

And the steady flow of art objects out of Africa continues unabated.

Traders commonly sneak across Africa's ill-defined and largely open borders with rare wood carvings.

African youths home on vacation from schools in London or Paris sometimes go back to classes with stolen village artifacts.

At many border posts, customs guards still turn a blind eye, for a consideration, as precious art goes by.

Diplomats, violating their special immunity, send home thousands of dollars worth of art objects in shipments never checked by customs officers.

Soaring demand in the United States and Europe for genuine African art objects has resulted in widespread fraud.

Collectors report that villagers are burying new masks for a few months to give the appearance of age. Others are roasting masks in efforts to convince buyers that they were used in dances around a village fire.

"Want to see an ancient sword my grandfather once used?" a trader in Mali asked a tourist.

The tourist didn't buy. Later he learned that hundreds of similar swords are made from parts of junked cars.

The exodus of rare art objects has alarmed African officials and control measures are in force.

"We do not prohibit the legitimate export of art objects," says Saburi Biobaku, who heads Nigeria's National Antiquities Commission in Lagos. "We let an object go if we have the original work. If we do not have it, we buy the original work from the collector seeking to take it away."

At the National Museum in Lagos, chief custodian of Nigeria's famous antiques, many foreigners seek authority to take art objects out of the country.

Biobaku says a federal decree is necessary to empower his commission to register all shrines and their contents throughout the country. "We want to properly document everything and be able to know where each art object is at any given time," Biobaku added.

In one recent incident, a European tried to sneak art objects out of Nigeria in a dugout canoe. Loading the little boat with artifacts, he slipped across the Lagos lagoon at night toward a waiting ship bound for Europe.

Police, acting on a tip, dashed across in pursuit in a speedboat. The man was caught just before boarding. He was later allowed to leave, but without his loot.

A year ago, Nigerian border guards seized art objects worth nearly $3 million from foreigners at the Dahomey border post. The case is still before the Nigerian courts.

Twelve traditional statues and effigies from the 16th century were reported stolen more recently from the palace of a traditional chief near Benin in Nigeria's Midwest State.

LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY:

Fishing More Than Hobby

By ROBERT PETERSON

Riviera Beach, Fla. — There were nine straw-hatted men standing at six-foot intervals on the inlet bridge. All were along in years and all were apparently realizing at last that long-standing dream of someday retiring and going fishing.

The sun was a pinpoint of fire in a cloudless blue sky. The fronds on low palms at each end of the bridge were motionless in the still air. The water was brilliant, sparkling aquamarine as it rippled in the current of the receding tide. The scene was silent except for the purr of a small fishing boat heading out to sea.

Each man on the bridge had eyes only for the slender line running from his rod to a point in the water some 50 feet distant. The pompano were running, and shrimp and minnows at the end of each line were the lure.

As the fish was brought to a point immediately beneath the bridge, all craned their necks to see it as it broke water and, fighting mad, was reeled up to its captor.

The pompano this morning were all about 10 inches long. But each new catch brought such friendly encouraging comments as, "That's a nice one," or "Looks like the biggest one yet today."

Were these men achieving what they wanted when they retired to Florida? Probably. Said a husky, square-jawed ex-Oklahoman, "We've been here three years. I used to do electrical contracting in Tulsa. When I retired at 67 I just sat around the house, read the paper, and watched television. We didn't mind the summers but we hated those long cold, gray winters. One day I said to the missus we should move to Florida and she said okay.

"We sold our house and furniture for $22,000 and just got in the car and headed south. When we got to Florida we drove down Highway A1A. We stopped and looked around every town we hit and figured we'd know when we came to the right one.

"We happened to stop for lunch at a cafeteria here, and watched them fishing off this bridge. We liked the looks of the area so we went to a realtor and he showed us six houses. We bought the last one — a two bedroom house and lost, complete with three orange trees in the backyard. It's the nicest house we ever owned, yet it cost just a little over $18,000. Then we spent another $2,000 for furniture and within four days were settled."

What does he do with his time? "I fish four hours every day, winter and summer. It might get boring except that I think of it as my job. Both my wife and I are on low fat diets and the doctor recommends fish. So I keep everything I catch and put it in the deep freeze. It sure cuts down on our food costs — our grocery bill never exceeds a dollar a day per person."

July 4th City Dedicates War Memorial

By DICK HOLMAN
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Seward — State officials had to pop in their comments between the reports of Ladyfinger blasts here Wednesday in Nebraska's Fourth of July City.

Unblinkingly, the dignitaries got on with the business at hand, dedicating a war memorial honoring Seward County residents who died in the four major conflicts since the Civil War.

Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh said of Navy Capt. Wendell Rivers, a former POW attending the dedication, "I know that all of you are pleased to have your hometown hero back."

Seward County officials presented Rivers with the "Nebraskan's Friend Award."

Marsh said, "We are indeed fortunate that we can have observations like this," adding he hoped no more war memorials would be necessary.

Citing a California Statehouse inscription that reads, "Give us men who have matched mountains," Secretary of State Allen Beerman said, "The men who have served and the men who have made the supreme sacrifice have matched mountains."

Although Seward has been gearing gala Independence Day doings for five years now, this one Wednesday was indeed a special one: The community was proclaimed the official Fourth of July City on June 12.

And the entire town was involved.

Planning began 'way last January with Kevin Keller and Melanie Bolte of Seward in charge.

"Thirty-one organizations worked together," said Kevin, 18.

"We like to keep youth involved," he said. The average age of the planning committee was 18½. The oldsters — including taverns, churches, community organizations — provided the money and the manpower.

After the dedication, rural volunteer firemen from surrounding towns donned their slickers in the 93-degree heat to man the firehoses in a downtown Seward water fight.

One fireman got an unexpected blast full in the face during the contest to spray a barrel down a cable.

Possibly 20,000 Sewardites and out-of-towners, according to one official's estimate, heard chimes concerts every hour, picnicked, swam, played softball and picked through a giant flea market on the court house lawn.

Even the thumps of bass drums couldn't drown out the fireworks as 16 queens, the Seward Patriettes, state and city officials, a tourist family captured by the Seward Jacyees, Capt. Rivers, Gov. J. J. Exon, and antique cars paraded through town to the wail of the Seward Volunteer Fire Department vehicles.

Everyone flocked to a giant barbeque at the city park, sponsored by the Seward Kiwanis, and a community carnival and ice cream social, courtesy of the Seward High School sophomore class.

Later on the city band played a concert, and Fourth of Julyers participated in games and contests, and parade awards were presented.

After a grandstand show, the City of Seward, the Chamber of Commerce and Jaycees put on a fireworks display. A battle of the bands sponsored by the House of Davisson capped off the festivities.

Gov. Exon said of Seward's celebration, "This is a good place to get back into our heritage."

Improved Transportation Slated For Rural Elderly

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

At least some of Nebraska's senior citizens living in rural areas will soon have better transportation because of a federal dollar windfall, according to a state official.

Ron Jensen, director of the State Commission on Aging, said Congress deicded last Saturday not only to appropriate $759,458 to Nebraska for the fiscal year which began July 1, but also appropriated the remainder of last year's money.

Last year's allocation under the Older Americans Act was originally supposed to be identical to this year's. But on a resolution basis, only about $460,000 was available for use by Nebraska.

Jensen said the only stipulation imposed when the remaining $296,000 of the original allocation was appropriated was that it has to be obligated by Dec. 31 of this year.

Because no plans were made for the money simply because it wasn't there during the 1973 fiscal year, the director said "we are in a position of having a one-time-only windfall of nearly $300,000."

The circumstances of how the money became available, however, created a problem when word of it was first received, Jensen said.

"We felt we had to be careful not to incur recurring or continuing costs because having more money than was planned for probably won't happen again next year at this time," he said.

Therfore, he said it was decided to help local and county governments in rural areas provide transportation especially for the elderly, which he added has been rated one of the top concerns of senior citizens.

"The message keeps coming through that transportation is a critical need and this is a real opportunity to provide it in the rural areas where it is needed and there appears to be no other way of providing it," Jensen said.

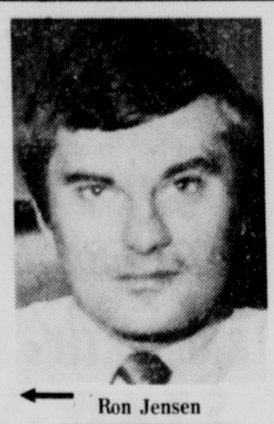

Specifically, he said the money would be used on a 75-25 matching basis, with local government providing the lower amount, to help purchase equipment.

Jensen also noted that in addition to the federal money, the Legislature at Gov. J. J. Exon's suggestion this year provided another $25,000 in state general fund money to help local government provide its share of the 25% match.

Lincoln, Omaha, Superior, Kearney and the Blue Valley area already offer transportation services for the elderly and receive federal funds from the regular federal allocations to the state.

Besides the transportation money, Congress also made available the remainder of the money for the Senior Citizen Nutrition Program for fiscal year 1973 of which about $303,958 of the promised $434,000 has been obligated, Jensen reported.

Nutrition programs are already in operation at Walthill where a $141,980 grant was approved and at the state's three Indian reservations via a $161,978 grant to the Inter-Tribal Development Corp., Jensen said.

Drownings Claim 3 Victims

Henry, Neb. (AP) — Two boys drowned in an irrigation canal north of here Tuesday afternoon.

Scotts Bluff County Coroner Marvin Holscher identified the boys as Neal Matthews, 7, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Matthews of Denver, Colo. and Bryan Howe, 8, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howe of rural Henry.

Holscher said the boys went bike riding Tuesday afternoon and apparently went for a swim in the canal.

Later in the afternoon, Holcher said, Mrs. Matthews began looking for the boys and discovered their bicycles and clothes on the bank of the irrigation canal.

Members of the Morrill rescue unit recovered the bodies Tuesday evening.

Another drowning occurred late Monday when 66-year-old Lloyd Miller, North Platte, fell into a gravel pit.

Tornado-Like Winds Do Damage; 4 Injured . . .

Some Spend Holiday Cleaning Up

By United Press International

Some residents of south central and eastern Nebraska spent at least part of their Fourth of July holiday Wednesday cleaning up debris left by overnight storms.

At least four persons were injured, three trailer courts damaged, numerous trees and power lines downed, four railroad cars derailed and a park closed in the aftermath of tornado-like winds, some hail and brief heavy rains.

A possible tornado plowed into the West Park Trailer Plaza three miles west of Grand Island, injuring four persons, none seriously, and demolishing eight trailers. A woman and two children were temporarily trapped in one of the overturned mobile homes.

Three trailers were damaged at the Shamrock Trailer Park just west of Grand Island, and the State Patrol reported numerous trees damaged and some power poles down in the Grand Island area.

The patrol said the Mormon Island Park south of Grand Island was closed Wednesday because trees were blocking roads through the park and some power lines were down.

Strong winds described as a tornado knocked four cars of a Union Pacific freight train off the tracks just east of Alda. A U.P. spokesman said train crews worked for 6½ hours to clear up the eastbound lane by early Wednesday.

Strong winds containing a possible tornado knocked out power lines southwest of Broken Bow and damaged trees in the Broken Bow area. Authorities said a hangar door was ripped off its hinges at the Broken Bow airport by the force of the winds.

Hamilton County Sheriff William Schultz said strong winds ripped into the Hamilton Plaza Trailer Court at the Phillips interchange off I-80, 12 miles west of Aurora.

Schultz said one trailer home was completely destroyed, several cars damaged and campers in the trailer court overturned by the winds. Some of the other permanent trailers in the court were shoved partly off their foundations.

In addition, Schultz reported damage to area farm buildings and wind damage to crops.

The Clay County sheriff's office reported strong winds and rain whipped down trees and power lines in Harvard. Sporadic power outages were reported on other Clay County areas.

Inhalation Therapy Program Scheduled

Omaha (AP) — The College of St. Mary in Omaha this fall will become the first institution of higher learning in the Nebraska-Iowa area to offer a program in respiratory therapy.

Sister Mary Mechtilde Hill, academic dean, said the college will offer both a two-year associate degree and a four-year baccalaureate degree.

The college will be the 26th in the nation to offer such a program.

Respiratory therapists, also called inhalation therapists, treat patients with breathing problems, ranging from chronic asthma to those suffering from heart failure, strokes and shock.

American Medical Association standards suggest there be one registered respiratory therapist in each hospital. At present there are five in Nebraska.

Sister Mary Mechtilde said arrangements are being made with area hospitals to provide clinical experience for the students.

She said the college was approached by several hospitals to begin the program "because of the critical shortage of respiratory therapists in this area. The fact that we are an approved allied health training center made the situation ideal."

The program will be under the direction of Lawrence Dahl, a registered inhalation therapist currently teaching at Parkland College at Champaign, Ill.

The two-year associate degree program will combine general education and respiratory therapy education in a collegiate environment. Upon completion of the program, the gradate is awarded the degree of associate in science in respiratory therapy, and is qualified to take the national examination to become a registered respiratory therapist.

The four-year bachelor of science program will include all the general education requirements, the completion of an appropriate minor and a number of professional education courses.

Crete Man Apparently Shot While Fishing Near Kramer

By The Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A 67-year-old Crete, Neb., man was shot to death Tuesday, apparently while fishing from a bank at Olive Branch Lake near Kramer, about 20 miles south of Lincoln.

His body was found Tuesday night by other fishermen.

Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas identified the victim as John L. Vajgrt, a widower who has two sons living in Lincoln.

Douglas said no death weapon was found but that sheriff's deputies were combing the area for clues.

The preliminary investigation indicated Vajgrt had gone fishing about 9 a.m. Tuesday at the lake, near Crete.

Word of the finding of the body reached authorities around sundown, and Douglas said removal of the body was hampered by heavy rains which struck the area just as authorities arrived.

Douglas said a preliminary investigation by a pathologist Wednesday morning disclosed the victim had been shot three times with a shotgun, once in the middle of the back and twice in the head.

"We believe he was shot right there because of evidence he was fishing," Douglas said.

The county attorney said that because of the heavy rain, authorities were unable to remove the body by bringing it up an embankment. It finally became necessary to cross the lake by boat to remove the body. An ambulance sent to the area became stuck in mud and had to be towed out.

Douglas said it appeared a 12 gauge shotgun had been used in the shooting.

He said no motive was apprent. "All we know is that it was a homicide."

Woman, 43, Run Over, Fatally Hurt

Omaha (UPI) — A 43-year-old Omaha woman was killed Wednesday when a car backed over her in the driveway of her north Omaha home.

Police said the victim, Ruby Watkins, 43, had gotten out of the car driven by Harlan Gilson, 54, of Omaha, and walked around behind it when Gilson inadvertently backed up the car.

Gilson was taken into custody and booked for driving under the influence and felony motor vehicle homicide.

Police accident investigator Sam John said Gilson said he had stopped to pick the Watkins woman up to take her to Council Bluffs, Iowa, when she said she had to return to the house to make a telephone call.

John said the car went back and forth several times after striking the Watkins woman, rolling her body up underneath.

Passersby told John they stopped and informed Gilson there was a body underneath his car and assisted in a futile attempt to jack up the vehicle. The Omaha rescue squad retrieved the body from underneath the car, and the victim was pronounced dead on arrival at a local hospital.

Police said even though the mishap occurred on private property, it would be counted as a traffic fatality, boosting Omaha's 1973 death toll to 21.

Nebraska Farmers Get Record Prices

From the standpoint of prices paid Nebraska farmers for their products, the cow has just jumped over the moon.

The index of prices received by agricultural producers in Nebraska reached the highest level of record in mid-June, the Division of Agricultural Statistics reported Wednesday.

Compared with a year earlier, the level was up 35 per cent; for the month, up three per cent.

The index, which uses the 1909-14 period as the 100-point base, stood at 474 at mid-June, compared with 350 a year earlier and 459 a month earlier.

The all-crops index at 284 represented a gain of about 67 per cent for the year, and nearly 14 per cent for the month.

The livestock and livestock products index at 546 was one point below the record set in mid-March, but up eight points for the year and up 129 points — or about 30 per cent — for the year.

Setting the price rise pace among crops were soybeans, which were bringing a record $9.90 per bushel in mid-June, up $1.75 for the month and up a whopping $6.60 from a year earlier.

Wheat brought $2.25 per bushel, up 27 cents for the month and $1 above the year-ago price.

Corn prices gained 30 cents during the month to $1.77, up 61 cents from a year ago.

Grain sorghum at $1.82 per hundredweight was 45 cents above May, and $1.07 above a year ago.

Hog prices advanced 50 cents during the month to $36.90 per hundredweight, up $11.60 from last year.

Beef cattle prices declined 10 cents during the month but, at $44.70, topped the year-go level by $8.70.

Giltner Cyclist, Leroy Marsh, Dies In Mishap

Giltner (UPI) — A rural Giltner motorcyclist was killed Tuesday night when his cycle struck a car broadside at the intersection of a Hamilton County road and the Giltner spur one mile north of Giltner.

The vitim was identified as Leroy Marsh, 19, and was Nebraska's first 4th of July holiday traffic fatality.

County Sheriff William Schultz said the Marsh motocycle was eastbound on the county road when it struck a westbound car turning left onto the spur.

The driver of the car, Dennis Ott, 17, Giltner, and two passengers escaped injury.

Omaha (UPI) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced the appointment of an assistant chief of engineering for its Missouri River division. Kendall C. Fox of Omaha was chief of the protective structures branch in the Omaha district office before his promotion to the Missouri River division. The corps said Fox, a Van Hook, N.D., native, has extensive experience in nuclear explosions, underground protective structures and powerhouse design.

Dollar Turns In One Of Year's Worst Records

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell to record lows in Europe on Wednesday in one of its worst performances of the year.

The American currency set new lows in Frankfurt, Paris, Zurich, Amsterdam, Brussels, Oslo, Milan and Stockholm. The drop in Frankfurt was one of the biggest on record for a single day.

Late in the afternoon the dollar rebounded to recover some of the day's loss. But dealers suggested the short-term outlook for the dollar was still gloomy.

There has been general agreement in European financial circles on the reasons for the basic weakness of the dollar in recent months. Key factors cited include the Watergate scandals, U.S. inflation, and disappointing American foreign trade figures.

But there was little agreement on reasons for the decline by the dollar on this Independence Day beyond the obvious conclusion that a lack of confidence was discouraging dollar buying.

Among the special factors cited by dealers were:

—A report by a respected West German economic institute that the 5½ per cent upward revaluation of the West German mark last week would not be enough to help the dollar and that more mark revaluations were therefore likely.

—Unconfirmed reports that an unnamed Middle East country had been selling dollars heavily in Europe.

—Suggestions that new U.S. restrictions on the export of soybeans and scrap metal would cut America's foreign earnings and hurt the dollar.

The variety of explanations suggested dealers were fishing for answers to what was happening. Some bankers found no economic reason for the market trends.

"This dollar decline reflects hysteria, nothing else," a Frankfurt banker said. "There is no valid economic reason that would depress the U.S. currency against the mark the way it did today."

Bankers in other European capitals agreed that the mark is now overvalued and the dollar undervalued, but that the absence of encouraging economic news from the United States could well depress the dollar further.

Under the floating system that took effect in European money markets in February, there is no "floor" level for the dollar. It can keep declining until traders decide to buy and drive dollar rates back up.

Volume in dollar sales has been relatively light, dealers report, but an absence of dollar buyers has resulted in big price swings.

In Germany, for example, the dollar dropped from 2.3850 marks to a low of 2.3115 marks, one of the largest declines for a single day on record. In the late afternoon it recovered most of the lost ground to close at 2.3725 marks.

Elsewhere the late afternoon recovery was less pronounced. In Zurich the dollar sagged from 2.8662 Swiss francs to a record low of 2.7900 Swiss francs. It closed at 2.8175 Swiss francs.

In Paris, the dollar dropped under 4 francs for the first time, sinking to 3.9987 commercial French francs. It had closed at 4.1180 francs Tuesday. After the official close Wednesday, the dollar strengthened in interbank trading to 4.05 Francs.

There were conflicting views on the reasons for the late afternoon rebound. Some dealers suggested profit taking. Others said government central banks could have intervened to support the dollar, but this was strongly denied by official sources here and on the Continent.

The dollar even lost ground in Italy, where the lira has been declining in recent weeks. The U.S. currency plunged more than 5 lira to a record low of 576 lira at the close.

In London, however, the dollar gained a small fraction. The pound closed down a quarter of a cent at $2.5760. Poor economic news in Britain has also hit the pound, which closed at or near lows in European markets Wednesday.

The dollar set record lows of 17.17 Austrian schillings, 5.215 Norwegian kroner, 34.95 Belgian francs, 3.965 Swedish crowns, and 2.5275 Dutch guilders.

The Shriners also elected Dr. Daniel E. Bowers, past potentate of Muhammed Temple of Peoria, Ill., as imperial honor guard.

Named turstees to the board of directors overseeing Shriner hospitals were Harvey Beffa, a past imperial potentate and a member of Moolah Temple in St. Louis, and C. Victor Thornton, past imperial potentate and a member of Moslah Temple of Fort Worth, Tex. Both will serve three-year terms.

Dancer's Attire On Way Home Brings Charges

Phoenix, Ariz. (UPI) — Police have charged a topless go-go dancer with driving home from work in her costume.

Officers said they stopped Kathryn Grace La Cava, 19, because her car was weaving.

She was cited for indecent exposure and for driving in violation of a license restriction, because one lens of her required glasses was broken.

Miss La Cava, who said she works in Scottsdale, told police she always drives home in her topless costume.

'Good Life' Escapes Caribbeans

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Queen's Park Savannah is a 200-acre expanse of soccer fields, cricket pitches, a horse track and grassy walks ringed by park benches.

Jobless black youths lounge there on the benches every day and occasionally buy a green coconut from sidewalk vendors to slake their thirst with the sweet, cool liquid inside.

"When you got no money in your pocket, you're unhappy," sighed Kenneth Clement, 22, as schoolboys played soccer nearby.

Clement, attired in blue jeans and a faded shirt, had just applied for a laborer's job at a traveling carnival near the horse track. No luck.

"I know something about masonry," Clement said, "and I can get a little work now and then. But there's nothing steady."

In April, 1970, youths like Clement surged through downtown Port of Spain during several days of black power-inspired violence. Four persons were killed and a number of stores burned.

Simultaneously, a group of young officers led an abortive mutiny within Trinidad and Tobago's tiny army.

A nation of 1.1 million people, Trinidad and Tobago, like many other independent islands in the Caribbean, has a black government. But the complaint of blacks is that whites run their economies for the most part.

The violence had been sparked by months of Black Power marches and open-air speeches which resulted in numerous clashes with police. The militants had a ready-made audience among young jobless blacks.

The economic and political problems of 1970 are still very much present. But for young blacks like Clement, the bitter racial anger that ignited three years ago has begun to fade.

Rather, this two-island ministate, as well as other English-speaking Caribbean islands, appear to be moving into a new era of introspection that rejects race as the sole basis of seeking solutions to the region's difficulties.

"I don't have hard feelings against nobody," said Leroy Dover, 23, another unemployed black habitue of Queen's Park benches. "I just want a job."

There is still violence in the Caribbean, some of it racially inspired, most of it a product of uncontrolled urban growth and depressing unemployment statistics, about 20 per cent here.

But the clenched fists thrust in the air and the bitter racial rhetoric of the organized Black Power movement are disappearing.

Observed a white foreign resident: "The 'Black is Beautiful' part of the movement has been good for Caribbean blacks. It has given them a sense of identity. But their blackness has now been established and they are moving on to more pressing matters."

Errol Balfor, a 23-year-old black activist who heads the Union of Revolutionary Organizations and is an vowed Marxist Socialist, talks of analyzing his country's problems from "a class point of view" and doesn't say much about black power.

"I don't see racism as being a whole theoretical instrument; something which can explain everything," he said in an interview.

Trinidad and Tobago suffers with other Caribbean islands from a public image that does not entirely square with reality.

For most of the islands, sun, and surf provide the only economic assets. Trinidad has oil and Jamaica has bauxite, which, makes them somewhat better off than the smaller islands.

After a decade of independence, these outcroppings of sand and volcanic rock have black men running their governments. But their economics are predominantly controlled by others.

Confronted by burgeoning populations, most of the islands simply cannot provide enough jobs for everyone.

"The average guy in the Caribbean these days just finds the rest of the world passing him by," said Hakin Gordon, a black anthropologist educated in Britain. Born on the tiny island of Dominica, he grew up in Bermuda.

"He can see in magazines, newspapers and television that a good life does exist out there. But his government can't seem to provide it and the rising cost of living keeps biting into his little paycheck."

The cost of living is expected to increase by 19 per cent in Trinidad and Tobago by the end of the year. The normal yearly rate is 9 per cent.

"I'm a black man and proud of it, but I sometimes wonder if we shouldn't have remained colonies a bit longer until we got more practice for governing after independence," Gordon said.

Control of their national economies has become a major preoccupation in the islands. For example, the majority of big investments in Trinidad and Tobago are foreign-controlled. U.S. investments alone, principally in oil production, are estimated to total half a billion dollars. Almost all imports are funnelled through white-controlled firms.

"There's a younger generation on stage that was born into freedom," said economics lecturer Lloyd Best, 39 of the University of the West Indies. "They see black men running the country and they want to know why black men don't own things."

Best heads one of several black organizations opposed to Prime Minister Eric Williams, mainly because his black government has been in power since 1956.

A number of the islands have taken various approaches to developing their economies and improving the quality of life for their inhabitants.

In Jamaica, the government of Prime Minister Michael Manley has adopted a "people" strategy without making any ideological commitments.

"We Jamaicans regard people as the only proper center of focus for all development effort," Manley said recently. "We see the problem not as one of selecting from amongst ideologies that may have been developed at other times in other places to suit other conditions; but as one of devising through our native ingenuity the systems most appropriate to our needs."

On the tiny island of Dominica, sandwiched between the French islands of Guadelope and Martinique, the local government has decided not to tamper with its basically rural-farming economy. Rather, it intends to develop a carefully-controlled tourist industry in four zones bordering the island's lush rain forest and majestic green mountains.

Trinidad and Tobago has been an active participant in efforts to promote regional cooperation, which it believes offer some solutions to the Caribbean's economic malaise. It is one of the founding members of a Caribbean Common Market scheduled to go into limited operation in August.

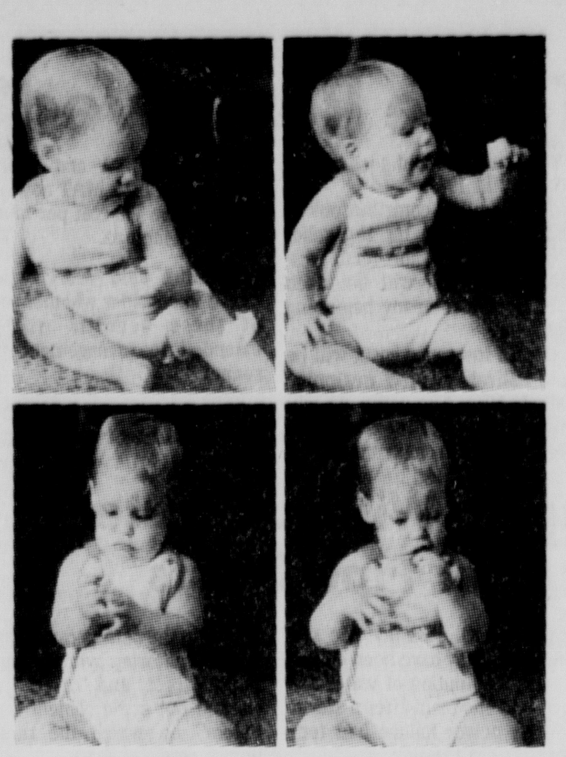

Trinidad and Tobago, Jamaica, Barbados and Guyana established diplomatic relations late last year with Cuba.

While Cuba's economy is tied to the Soviet Union, there is a feeling that the Cubans can demonstrate some useful accomplishments.

Prime Minister Williams, recently criticizing the University of the West Indies for graduating too many liberal arts majors and too few specialists, said 2,000 out of 28,000 students at the University of Havana are studying agriculture and veterinary science. At the University of the West Indies which has campuses in Jamaica, Barbados and Trinidad, there are only 186 out of 5,678 students studying these subjects.

Added to this, he said, is the "brain drain" to more developed countries.

"If West Indian nurses ever stop working in New York City," remarked Branford Taitt, minister of trade in Barbados, "the hospitals there would have to shut down."

Tyke Has Tape Problem

Eleven-month-old Jason Griffin of Garland, Tex., went about his daily chore of exploring his domain when he noticed a piece of tape on his leg. Removing the unwanted addition turned out to be quite a job; like a good book he found it hard to put down. Finally he attacked the problem with all five teeth — successfully.

Europeans Buying U.S. Antique Rugs

Los Angeles — In the past 14 years, antique rugs (100 years or older) have been extensively exported from the United States because Europeans are willing to pay up to five times more than American collectors.

One expert predicts that some rugs now selling for under $2,000 will, in 10 to 20 years, be worth $50,000 or $60,000.

Iran Defense Decision May Get Nixon Praise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, the shah of Iran, will visit with President Nixon in the last half of July, but a firm date has not been set, diplomatic sources said.

The shah is expected to repeat in unmistakeable terms that his country has taken over the responsibility for security and peace in the Persian Gulf area.

It is expected that Nixon will applaud the shah's statement. The United States is selling Iran a reported $2 billion worth of military equipment ranging from phantom planes to laser-guided bombs.

The situation in the Persian Gulf has been watched closely because of the energy crisis and the administration's decision to provide weapons not only to Iran but also to Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

Iran's modern equipment, also provided by Britain, makes Iran the No. 1 military power in the area.

The oil-rich country is also important because it controls shipping lanes in the Strait of Hormuz, the waterway connecting the Persian Gulf with the Gulf of Oman and the Indian Ocean.

The shah's last visit here was in October 1969.

Omaha Bus Pact To Be Reviewed?

Omaha (UPI) — The possibility of an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Review of the new agreement between Metro Area Transit (MAT) and Omaha bus drivers was raised Tuesday.

Jerome T. Erdman, MAT executive director, said in detailing terms of the agreement that the settlement exceeded the 5.5% federal guidelines and could be subjected to federal review.

"I won't say I except an IRS review," Erdman said, "but I won't be surprised if there is one."

The increase in wages and fringe benefits is 6.9% for the first year and 6.6% for the second. Erdman said at a news conference that both union and MAT negotiators consider it "a successful settlement." Drivers were getting $4.01 per hour under the old agreement.

The settlement, Erdman said, will "definitely not" cause an increase in fares. He said a proposed increase in the MAT tax levy to one full mill was not suggested to take care of the new labor agreement, but "looks more toward future expansion of services."

Erdman said the final stages of negotiations dealt with health insurance for the drivers. The negotiators "were very, very close" to a settlement Saturday night when the drivers elected to stage a one-day Sunday strike, he said. The strike ended Sunday night, and full service was restored Monday morning.

The agreement calls for a 25¢ hourly increase as of July 1, with an additional 15¢ increase effective July 1, 1974. The pension for drivers with 20 years of experience remains at $100 per month this year, but goes to $120 monthly in 1974.

The employe contributions of $3.25 per month for the relief association, a short-term disability program, will be taken over by the company beginning this year.

Health insurance costs will be paid entirely by MAT beginning July 1, 1974. The company will take over 40% of the employes' present health insurance contribution Aug. 1 and another 10% Jan. 1, 1974. MAT now pays $26.90 of the $60 cost per month for each employe.

Erdman said MAT would "have to consider whether some of these benefits will be extended to management personnel."

The drivers voted 110-42 to accept the new two-year agreement.

Gaslight Villagers Without Water For 12 Hours After Pipe Bursts

Residents of Gaslight Village mobile home park were without water for about 12 hours Wednesday after a 16-inch water main ruptured early Tuesday.

Tom Zimmerer, manager of the mobile home park, estimated that the pipe was broken about 3 a.m. Tuesday. He said the break may have been caused by the resumption of water service into the main after a storm-related power failure had temporarily cut the flow.

Zimmerer said the break may have caused some damage to homes in the park because water has been flowing over the park's main street and could have washed out some cement block "piers" on which the mobile homes rest.

Residents were not completely without water, however. The Lincoln Water System pumped water from a nearby fire hydrant to the fire hydrant in the village. Zimmerer said this enabled residents to combat the hot Independence Day weather.

Complete water service was restored to the village about 3 p.m. Zimmerer credited the water company with a "marvelous job" in repairing the water main and bringing service back to normal by mid-afternoon.

North Platte Fund Drive Nears Goal For Hospital

North Platte (AP) — The fund raising campaign for a new North Platte hospital is within two percent of it's minimum goal of $1.2 million.

Drive leaders announced Tuesday that the new total was up to $1,178,302.

Drive Chairman Dale Walkenhorst said, after a breakfast meeting for campaign workers, that the total was boosted to the new level with a final report from the Railroad Electricians Union.

He said the new report pushed that group's total to more than $4,000.

Glenn Walton and Vic Janecek, of The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 1920, said solicitation was complete in the local, and more than $900 in pledges and gifts brought the local's total to $4,250.

"That's the first complete report, and the best so far of any railroad group," said Floyd Goldsmith, general chairman for the railroad phase of the drive.

He said total Union Pacific employe gifts were over $6,000.

He said a concentrated effort would be made the last part of this week and early next week, and that a victory celebration would be scheduled in mid-July.

Grain Elevator Manager Says Story Is Untrue

Melvin Searcey, manager of the grain elevator at Liberty, said the statement by a farmer quoted in a story in the Sunday Journal and Star about local grain prices is inaccurate.

The story quoted a local farmer who said he had been offered $1.63 a bushel for corn on Friday at the Liberty elevator and $1.95 at a nearby elevator. The farmer blamed the difference in price on a shortage of boxcars at Liberty.

Searcey said, "Our records show we were offering $1.86 for corn on Friday. It is true, however, that we have received very few cars to haul grain this year."

Searcey said the $1.86 bid was genuine and was paid for corn on Friday but added he didn't want to fill his elevator with corn just before the wheat harvest because of the demand for storage space for wheat at the elevator.

Omaha Workers Fail To Choose Between Unions

Omaha (AP) — An election to determine which union should represent Omaha city employes apparently has ended in a standoff.

Judge Dean Kratz of the Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations said neither of two unions received a majority of votes in the election conducted by the court.

State law requires that the union designated to represent the employes shall obtain a majority of those voting.

Kratz said the court has not decided what order will be issued.

He explained that the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes union received 374 votes, the Teamsters Public Employes Union received 349 and 59 voted for no union.

More See Scotts Bluff Monument

Gering (AP) — The number of visitors to the Scotts Bluff national monument here has increased 24% this year, and officials say they don't know why.

Monument Superintendent Donald Harper said that last year between January and June, 52,089 persns visited the monument.

This year the total for the first six months was 64,612.

The largest monthly increase, 83%, was recorded during June, when 24,290 persons visited the monument.

"I wish I knew why," commented Harper, when asked if there were any specific reasons for the increase.

Harper said, "We kind of suppose some people are taking vacations earlier this year, possibly because of the fuel situation, but we can't verify it."

Harper advised all persons who are planning to visit the monument to use extra caution when driving because of the increase in the number of motor vehicles in the area.

Trailer Sales Up

Detroit — U.S. truck-trailer output reached a record 174,963 units in 1972. Sales of 181,000 units are expected in 1973.

More Blacks Enroll

Washington — Proportionately, about as many Negro as white high school graduates went on to college in 1972, with 49.4 per cent of whites and 47.6 per cent of blacks enrolled. This compares with 56.6 per cent for whites and 46.2 per cent for blacks in 1968.

Spanish Broadcasts Filling Ethnic Vacuum

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On an increasing number of radio and television stations in the United States the message is: "Si, yo hablo Espanol — Yes, I speak Spanish."

More than 100 stations broadcast entirely or partly for the 12 million Latin Americans concentrated mainly in the Southwest, New York, Miami and Chicago.

The Spanish-speaking people make up the second largest ethnic minority in this country, topped only by the 23 million blacks.

Advertisers were slow to recognize the vast buying power of the people and in many areas they were poorly served by only occasional radio programs in Spanish.

But in the past dozen years Spanish broadcasters moved in to fill this vacuum and capture the expanding market.

"These people were never served by the English language stations to begin with. We're working within a different cultural environment," said Rene Anselmo, president of the Spanish International Network, which serves 13 television stations from New York to Los Angeles, including four along the border in Mexico.

Howard Kalmenson, president of the Lotus Three Corp., which operates KWKW in Los Angeles and KOXR in Oxnard, said, "Our radio stations are radio as it once was. It's not top 40, country or rock. It's community radio.

"Our foundation is to entertain, but the way to succeed is for people to believe you. They won't believe you if you just play records. We have a responsibility to the community in presenting news and opinion and public affairs."

In the Los Angeles area, where the Spanish-speaking population is 1.5 million, personalities use street language to urge youngsters to "cool it, stay in school and stay off drugs," Kalmenson said. KWKW successfully campaigned to have California driver education books printed in Spanish.

By far most of the money spent in reaching this market goes into television and radio. Oral communications is a significant factor in the home countries.

Mexico, for instance, has a well-established television system. In addition, recent migrations have largely been into areas with well-established Latin populations, thus they tend to cling to their language and culture.

Anselmo, who got into broadcasting in Mexico City in 1952, said he sees the Spanish network as the first of other specialized television systems.

"We've been specializing for 12 years and others are just waking up to it," he said. "If broadcasters don't specialize, cable will. Mass broadcasting is a myth created by the advertising agencies.

"I think the Spanish International Network is the forerunner of other specialized networks. I've always thought there should be a black network. It's the other great area of this country that's not being served."

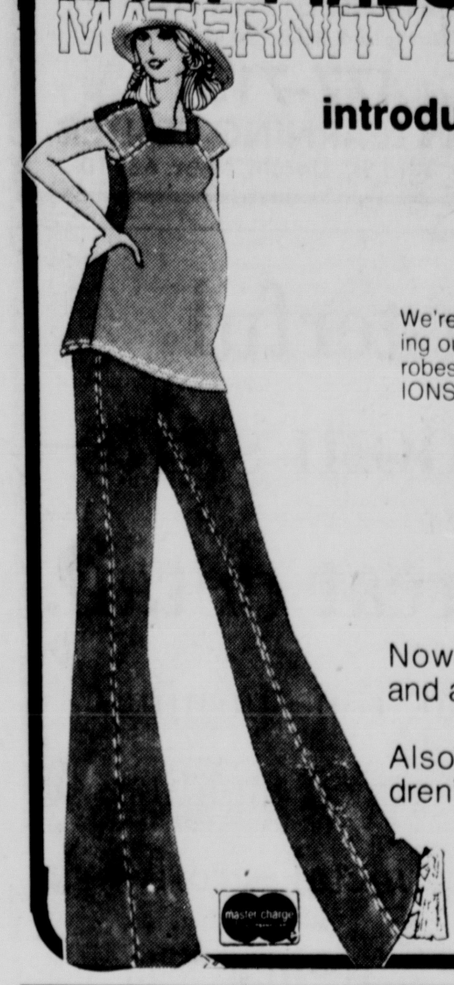

Yet within this ethnic group there are broad differences that are reflected in programming. Dialects, customs and preferences vary from the Puerto Ricans in New York, the Cubans in Miami to the Mexican-Americans in the Southwest.

Limited budgets prevent much original programming except news and public affairs — the network does present live coverage of the space shots and election results. The stations largely subsist on a diet of entertainment programs imported from Mexico, South America, Puerto Rico and Spain. The shows from Spain do well in New York and Miami, but not in Los Angeles, where the viewers prefer Mexican soap operas. A musical astrology show from Puerto Rico is popular in New York and Miami, but the Los Angeles and San Antonio stations won't run it.

In sports, viewers in New York like baseball, Miami prefers boxing and Los Angeles likes soccer.

Anselmo said his biggest stumbling block in obtaining commercials is the language barrier. "An advertiser who's just spent $50,000 to shoot a commercial in English doesn't want to turn around and spend another $50,000 to shoot it in Spanish," he said.

Jehovah's Witnesses Head For Clash With African Patriots

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — African patriots seem headed for a showdown with growing numbers of the Jehovah's Witnesses who don't believe in saluting flags or singing national anthems.

The religious sect's beliefs clash sharply with the increasingly strident nationalism of black African states.

While the sect is small it has angered politicians across Africa from Malawi to Nigeria and Kenya to Cameroon where they have been either banned, persecuted or publicly vilified.

It is mainly the refusal of the Jehovah's Witnesses to become involved in national political life that has provoked trouble.

The sect, whose belief centers around the doctrine of the second coming of Christ, regards governments as the work of Satan — thus the refusal to salute flags or sing national anthems.

Founded in the United States in 1878, the Jehovah's Witnesses were known before 1931 as Russellites, after Charles Taze Russell, who organized them.

Teachers in Nigeria's West Central State, a predominantly Roman Catholic region, have urged the state government to ban the group.

This followed a decision by the Jehovah's Witnesses to withdraw their children from recent celebrations of Children's Day, a Nigerian national holiday.

The teachers described the pullout as "a rebellion against constituted authority" which was "unwholesome and detrimental to law and order."

Explained one of the Jehovah's Witnesses: "Our children will not take part in any sort of national celebration because it makes them worshippers of Nigerian leaders."

A few months earlier, in Nigeria's Mid-West State, some 30 children were expelled from school for refusing to sing the national anthem or salute the flag.

The church-state conflict, however, has been considerably sharper in other African nations.

Late last year about 10,000 Jehovah's Witnesses were reported to have fled into Zambia, from Malawi.

The flood of refugees, according to published reports, followed attacks mounted against the sect by the Young Pioneers, the youth wing of the Malawi Congress party.

Some reports, all denied by Malawi, said about 60 Jehovah's Witnesses were killed.

The group was repatriated later amid a flurry of denials by Malawi's president, Kamuzu Banda, that any persecution had taken place.

Banda said they fled "because they had been misled by their fanatical and ignorant leaders who had told their followers that God was about to destroy Malawi — as at Armageddon — and that to escape His wrath they must flee the country."

In Zambia, according to reports from that country, about 2,000 Jehovah's Witnesses have been expelled from schools in the past year for refusing to salute the flag or sing the national anthem.

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, according to these reports, has used the country's security powers to stop the sect from house-to-house appeals for funds.

In Cameroon, the Jehovah's Witnesses were banned after thousands of them abstained in presidential elections in 1970.

But despite the opposition of President Ahmadu Ahidjo, a Moslem, the sect continues to operate underground in that country.

In April, they were banned in Kenya where they were branded "dangerous" to good government.

Last week, Gen. Idi Amin's government in Uganda banned the Jehovah's Witnesses and 10 other religious sects which were described as being dangerous to peace and order.

President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire also has effectively banned the Jehovah's Witnesses, insisting that all Protestant churches and sects worship under the umbrella of the Church of Christ in Zaire, formerly the Congo.

Statistics on the number of African members of the sect are sketchy.

One published report puts the total figure in black Africa at 260,000, with about 10,000 in Cameroon, 14,000 in Zaire, 15,000 in Ghana, 22,000 in Malawai, 86,000 in Nigeria, 12,000 in Rhodesia, 24,000 in South Africa, 56,000 in Zambia and several other thousands in Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania.

The sect flourished immediately after World War II as dozens of missionaries flocked to Africa to spread the word of Jehovah.

Its adherents maintain a rigid discipline and the movement appears to be gaining increasing popularity, especially in West Africa.

"You cannot find a Jehovah's Witness in the prisons," says one member of the sect in Lagos. "We are never arrested for stealing or for armed robbery or for any other social vices that are prevalent in our society."

But continued conflict with Africa's governments seems inevitable since, as one Jehovah's Witness put it, "It is only God we will worship and respect on this earth."

Misnomer

Portland, Ore. — The term, "dry rot," is a misnomer, since wood must be wet to decay. Wood flooring 5,000 years old has been found intact in an Egyptian tomb. It never became wet, and fungi never had a chance to work on it.

80% Expect Gain

Washington — More than 80 per cent of the nation's major manufacturing and nonmanufacturing industries are expected to show net income gains of 5 per cent or more in 1973, the Commerce Department reports.

Sod Webworms

Sod Webworms are the larvae of lawn moths. The adults are small, whitish or gray moths (or millers) folding their wings closely about their bodies when at rest. They hide in the shrubbery during the day, and during the early evening, they fly over the grass scattering their eggs over the lawn. The Sod Webworm is about 3/4-inch long, light brown, and their bodies are covered with fine hairs. The Sod Webworm feeds on the crown of the grass, which destroys the plant. When this happens, brown spots (dead grass) appear in the lawn.

'Perry Mason' Recycled For Fall Season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seemed inevitable that television in its insatiable hunger for successful formulas would return to one of the most successful of all time — "Perry Mason."

"Perry Mason," which ran for nine years on CBS and probably will run forever in syndication, is being revised, revamped and recycled for the fall season.

The Erle Stanley Gardner creation, a lawyer who never loses a case — at least not on the air, will be played by Monte Markham. Markham left the Broadway production "Irene" after winning out over 300 other actors in a nine-month talent hunt. The other parts are still being cast.

Ernie Frankel, who is coproducer of the show with Art Seid, professes not to be concerned that Raymond Burr may be indelibly stamped in the minds of most viewers as Perry Mason.

"With all due respect for Ray, he did not create Perry Mason. Erle Stanley Gardner did," said Frankel, who was story consultant the last year of the old series.

"I think what Monte Markham will bring to the role is an interpretation of Gardner's work for 1973."

In structure the show will be the same. There will be no tampering with that. Mason, aided by Della Street and Paul Drake, will confront Dist. Atty. Hamilton Burger and Lt. Tragg in the courtroom climax. His client will be wrongly accused of murder and each week Mason will sift through the clues to determine the real killer.

"We're going to preserve the Gardner concept," said Frankel. "He was the most successful mystery writer in the world. That formula works.

"But this is 1973 and if Gardner were alive today he would be the first to say let's make it real. His philosophy always was to be with it and reflect the world. Mason will be a contemporary figure."

In the original series Della spent most of her time answering the telephone. She will be a little more liberated now, serving as an assistant to Mason.

Frankel said, "We'll be able to do things in the show we couldn't do before. As long as it's done in good taste.

"You won't see Della and Perry getting out of bed together, but you will see that they are devoted to each other."

Markham, who previously starred in two flop comedy series, "The Second Hundred Years" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," was picked for the role after a talent hunt that began last October.

Like Perry Mason on the scent, Frankel and Seid went through more than 300 candidates. They interviewed actors, sat through many hours of film and brought in two casting directors to help.

They were aware of Markham, having been impressed with a role he did for a series they produced, "My Friend Tony."

"Screen tests were run for most of the finalists, and Markham took time out from "Irene" to go to a New York television studio. "Monte sat in front of a camera and talked off the cuff for seven minutes," Frankel said. "He talked about reading 'Perry Mason' in high school and at the University of Georgia. He told what kind of a person he thought Perry Mason was.

"When the tape was shown later to the principals and the lights came on, everyone said, 'There's Perry Mason.'"

Frankel said the series will make no pretense to relevance. "This is pure entertainment," he said. "We will be concerned with issues, but they will be basic issues: life, death, greed, power, vengeance, pride."

Asked about Mason's winning streak, he said, "Gardner's answer to that was he always won because he always defended an innocent man. Mason will lose cases — but not on CBS on Sunday nights."

Chinese Fallout Still Over Sea

Washington (AP) — The airborne fallout cloud from China's recent big H-bomb test still is stalled over the Pacific Ocean, the Atomic Energy Commission said Wednesday.

Current weather conditions do not permit accurate forecasting of when the fallout might reach the continental United States and it is possible it might not do so, the AEC said.

Even if it does reach this continent, it is not expected by the AEC to present any health hazard.

Aspen Institute Selects Fellows

New York (UPI) — The board of trustees of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies elected five prominent men as the institute's first fellows.

The five are: Herbert Bayer, a painter, designer and architect; Sir Alan Bullock, a historian and vice chancellor of Oxford University; Douglass Cater, an author, editor and educator; Paul Horgan, a novelist, historian and biographer; and Dr. Walter Orr Roberts, a solar astronomer.

Couple Rescued After 117 Days On A Lifeboat

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The rescue of a shipwrecked English couple after drifting 117 days in a lifeboat in the Pacific was reported by the Coast Guard on Wednesday.

Michael C. Bailey, 41, and his wife, 32, were picked up last Saturday by the Korean freighter Wolmi about 400 miles southeast of Acapulco, Mexico, the Coast Guard said.

There was no report on the Southampton, England, couple's condition, but the Wolmi apparently is proceeding on its voyage to Korea.

The Coast Guard said the Wolmi reported the Bailey's yacht Auralyn sank last March 4,400 miles west of the Ecuador coast.

"I count that to be 117 days from March 4 to June 30," the Coast Guard spokesman said.

The Baileys were on a cruise from Southampton to Korea.

Jailed Russian Faces Verdict Of New Trial

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian historian Andrei Amalrik, 35, was due to complete a three-year term May 21 in a remote labor camp near Talaya. He had been sentenced for slandering the Soviet state.

Two days before the scheduled release, Amalrik was charged anew — with slandering the Soviet state. His wife, Gyuzel, said Wednesday she had received a telegram from him saying he is to be tried July 10.

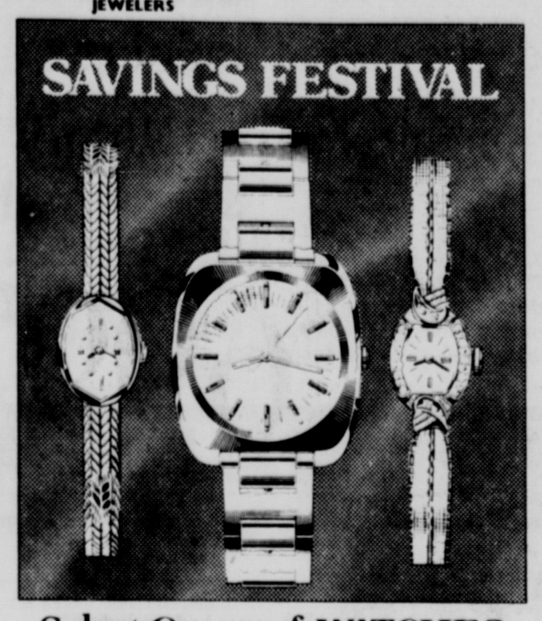

Mrs. Amalrik can only presume that the latest charge is based on something that took place within the labor camp.

Last General In Saigon Sees End To U.S. Role

SAIGON (AP) — When Maj. Gen. John E. Murray woke up March 30, he realized he was the last army general left in South Vietnam and he said to himself: "What the hell am I doing here?"

The last American troops pulled out of Vietnam March 29 after more than a decade of direct U.S. involvement, and Murray said: "I think a lot of people who saw me also kept thinking, 'What the hell is he doing here?' "

Murray is the defense attache at the U.S. Embassy, the top-ranking American officer here.

"My continuing guidance is to close things out, wind things up — and get out. It's like a broken record," he said.

Admittedly, it's not an easy task to be the cleanup man in a war that involved several million Americans and billions of U.S. dollars.

But the wiry general of craggy features, wavy salt and pepper hair and a wry wit is determined to reduce the American presnce in Vietnam. "There's tremendous pressure on us and we're going to do it right here in the defense attache's office," he said.

By unwritten agreement reached in Paris before the Jan. 28 cease-fire accord, the United States was permitted to keep 50 military men and 1,200 Defense Department civilians in Vietnam to continue training South Vietnamese, take care of replenishing supplies for their army — and monitor the continuing violation of the cease-fire.

But Murray wants to go from the ceiling to the cellar as quickly as possible.

"Our effort is to Vietnamize — to turn everything over to the Vietnamese," he said. "This is a particular problem when it comes to American contractors. I try to lean toward Vietnamese contractors every time we go to bids."

There are presently 3,800 Americans working on military contracts in South Vietnam, but at a recent meeting of the nine largest Defense Department contractors, Murray said their days were numbered.

"You fellows represent about $200 million worth of taxpayers' money. They're looking at what you're doing," he said. "We have four drawers full of the names of former Vietnamese employes cleared up to secret and I think we ought to take advantage of this."

"If it takes five Vietnamese to replace one U.S., let's do it," Murray said. It takes roughly $20,000 a year to keep one U.S. contract employe here. It'll take a lot of Vietnamese to reach that."

In the next fiscal year, he said, only U.S. contracts involving the Air Force, communications and computer management and support activities would probably be renewed. Otherwise, he said, contracts will be going to the Vietnamese — particularly in the construction field.

Under the Paris cease-fire agreement, the United States is entitled to replace worn out or war-damaged military equipment for the South Vietnamese army on a one-to-one basis — a job which also falls under Murray's command.

The 54-year-old general, an attorney, is a logistics expert.

During a recent trip to the Vietnam army arsenal Murray, who started his army career as a private in 1941, watched a corps of 15-, 16- and 17-year-olds renovating tanks, trucks and jeeps.

"In the beginning," he said, "all this had to be shipped out to Taiwan, Okinawa and Japan where it was fixed and shipped back. Now, if they can do part of it here, we save all that money."

Then there is the lost money — like the $6 million worth of ammunition destroyed by sappers at the Long Binh ammunition dump. That explosion in May also damaged more than a dozen warehouses and fouled up a computerized system for keeping track of all stored equipment.

"Every piece of equipment here is registered in the computer and whenever a part is needed, it's called up and located by number," Murray said. "Now, because of the damage to the buildings, they've had to relocate a lot of the parts."

Murray starts his day at 5 a.m., running a mile in the dark, starts work around 7:30 and gets home about 7 p.m.

Murray was born in Clifton, N.J., has a masters degree in international affairs from George Washington University and studied law at the New York Law School and St. John's University in New York. He likes to read history and has a soft spot for cowboy movies.

During World War II, he served as an enlisted gunner aboard a tanker and later as a company grade officer in the Mediterranean theater. He served in a logistics command in the Korean War, headed a transportation command in Vietnam in 1969 and was director of logistics before taking over as defense attache.

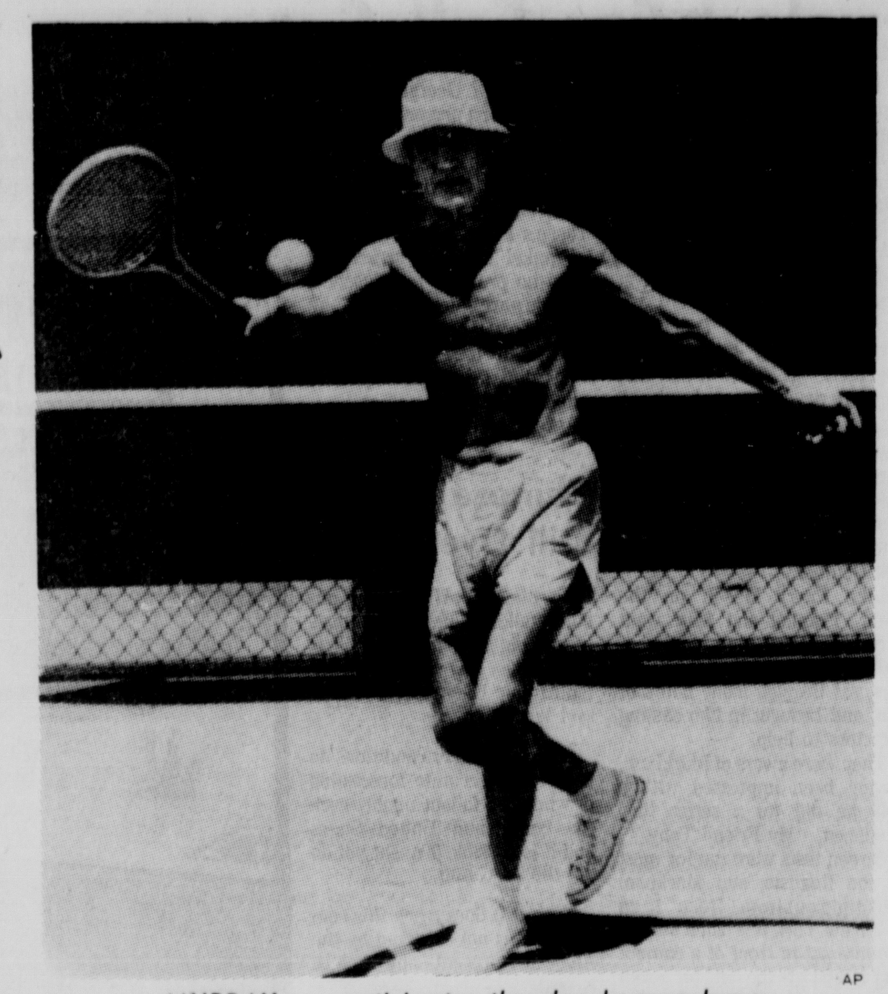

His first wife died three years ago and he recently married the former Phyllis Gunther of Honolulu who gets up to run with him at 5 a.m.

He is promoting a program to have U.S. contract employes work in Vietnamese orphanages.

"I think we Americans have a moral responsibility for these children," he said. "I think half of these kids have American parents on one side, and anything we can do for them is little enough."

The future of South Vietnam?

"This is a precious country," he said. "It's like Michelangelo's chipped Madonna, the Pieta. It's worth saving."

Big-Hearted Thief Leaves $50 Behind

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago robber has done his part to help the economy — his own and that of his victim.

Police said a man brandishing two handguns took $1,700 from a supermarket, but returned $50 of the loot when the manager said he needed the money to keep the store open for the evening.

Police said the gunman went to the market's office window to buy a $20 money order, then pulled out the two revolvers and ordered the clerk to empty the safe.

Police said the manager saw the holdup, went over to the robber and asked that he leave some of the money. The man gave the manager a bag containing nickels, dimes and quarters.

Fourth Of July Marked In Peking

PEKING (AP) — Chinese officials in dark blue Mao suits outnumbered Americans Wednesday at the first official Fourth of July party in China in almost a quarter-century.

U. S. envoy David K. E. Bruce and China's vice foreign minister, Chiao Kuan-hua, lifted glasses of rice liquor to toast "lasting friendship between the American and Chinese peoples."

About 75 Peking diplomats and other officials joined eight visiting U. S. congressmen at the subdued reception inaugurating the red-tiled U.S. liaison office headquarters complex.

Some rooms were still bare of furniture, and all lacked rugs or curtains. A U.S. Official said the air conditioners were still in crates. Both temperature and humidity were in the 80's in the Chinese capital.

The reception was a last-minute affair. Invitations went out to more than 90 top Chinese leaders, including Premier Chou En-lai, just as workmen completed the building last week.

Among the Chinese at the affair were Li Chiang, vice minister of foreign trade, and two assistant foreign ministers, Chang Wen-chin and Wang Hai-jung.

It was the first official U. S. diplomatic function in China since the Communists took power under Mao Tse-tung in 1949. The United States and China ended years of intervening enmity in 1972 with a visit to Peking by President Nixon.

They subsequently agreed to exchange diplomatic liaison offices that, while not officially of embassy level, give each country representation in the other's capital.

A delegation of U. S. senators and representatives joined Bruce in the receiving line. The congressmen and their wives met privately and informally earlier in the day with Chiao at the Chinese Foreign Ministry for half an hour.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., the senior member of the delegation, greeted Chiao saying: "I'm hopeful this tour might add another page to the communications between our countries."

Magnuson said after the meeting that Chiao had made a strong plea for rapidly increasing the level of U.S.-Chinese trade.

"He said he wanted to keep open the main lines of communication, and one of them is reciprocal trade."

A major problem, he said, was how China could make key purchases from the United States now without building up "a permanent debt."

Magnuson said the four senators and four congressmen would hold a series of talks with ranking Chinese officials in the next two weeks with the emphasis on trade.

Food Industry Losing Requests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The food industry is peppering the Cost of Living Council with requests for exemptions from President Nixon's price freeze but losing most of the time.

The council said the food industry has been predominant in the list of more than 350 requests by companies or trade associations claiming severe economic hardship.

Despite claims that the freeze is creating food shortages and threatening some food stores with bankruptcy, the council said few will be permitted to increase prices.

In fact, in a majority of both food and non-food requests, severe economic hardship has not been very evident, said Bert M. Concklin, the council's operations director.

"We will not take seriously horror stories that are not documented," Concklin said.

The council rejected 32 of the first 36 requests for exemptions and said it intends to follow about the same heavy pattern of denials while the freeze lasts.

The food industry was not so predominant with requests for exemptions during the 1971 freeze and the wage-price controls that followed in Phases 2 and 3. One reason was that raw agricultural products were exempt all the way to the supermarket during most of that time.

But when Nixon froze prices again on June 13, he also put ceilings on supermarket prices and wholesale prices of raw agricultural products, leaving only the first sale at the farm free from the freeze.

According to council officials, this explains the heavy percentage of exception requests in the food industry.

Despite some of the highly publicized problems of businesses during the present freeze, Concklin said that there have been a surprisingly small number of exemption requests when compared with the first freeze and Phase 2 and 3 price controls.

"I don't think we are getting any more," he said.

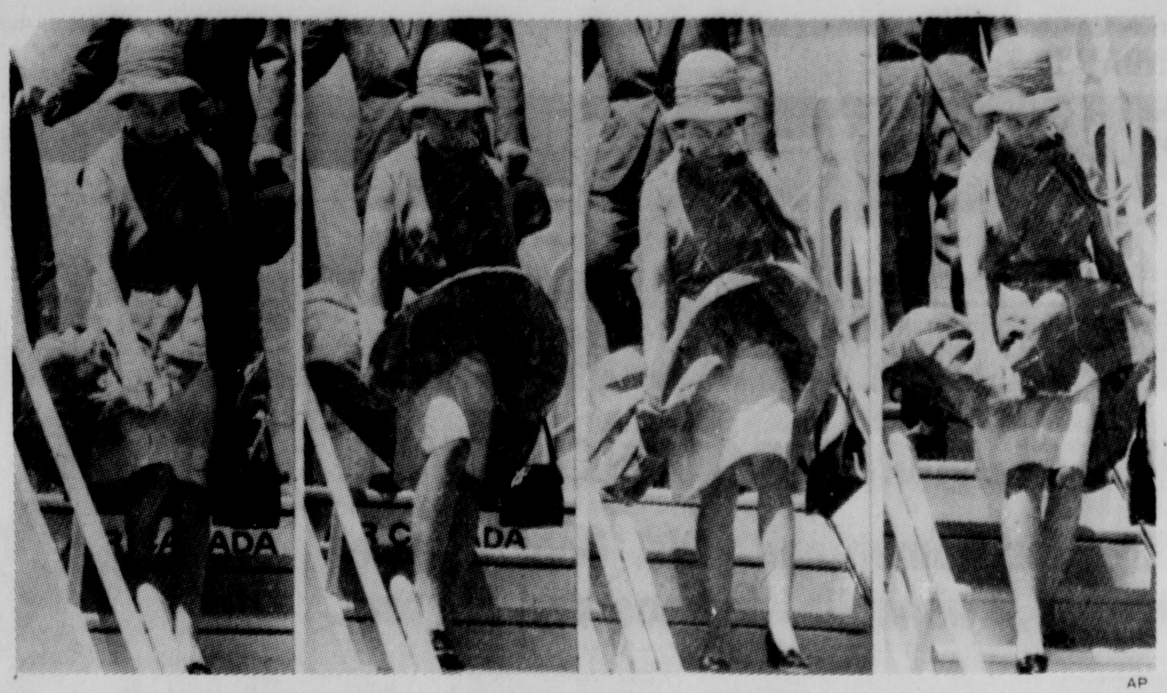

Companies are now much more sophisticated in seeking exemptions, he said, usually hiring lawyers to handle their claims and sometimes making oral presentations to the staff of about 15 handling requests.

About one-fourth of the companies seek a personal audience, Concklin said, and are told that they will get an answer in three to five days.

The council has indicated that it is seriously considering lifting the freeze in the food industry within two to three weeks. But the system that will follow will contain stiff controls, it says.

Council officials said one proposal would make the rules so severe as to require some companies to absorb some of their own costs, such as higher wages or the increases in prices of raw materials.

If this happens, food prices would go up again. The council said they wouldn't go up as much as they might if retail food stores were allowed to charge customers their full cost.

'Twas A Bit Windy For Her Majesty

A gusty wind greeted Queen Elizabeth II when she arrived in Thunder Bay, Ont. The sovereign of Canada was able to regain control of her dress in time to meet with officials waiting for her at the plane. Later the queen and her consort, Prince Phillip, went to Regina, Sask., to take part in ceremonies marking the centennial of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Gunman's Brother Shot In Bar Dispute

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — John M. Whitman had some scrapes with the law in the months after his brother, Charles, shot and killed 16 persons in the University of Texas tower incident.

"But then a couple of years ago he began straightening himself out," police said Wednesday, hours after Whitman, 24, was shot to death following an argument at a bar here.

Charles Joseph Whitman also was 24 in August 1966 when he murdered his mother and wife, then climbed the clock tower at the University of Texas in Austin and killed 14 other persons before being shot and killed by police.

"It is a terrible tragedy for the family, they have been through so much," said Lake Worth Police Sgt. Bill Openshaw who knew the family well.

Openshaw said Whitman had gone to the bar Tuesday night after a day of studying for exams, intending to have a couple of drinks and return home to continue his studies.

"There were a lot of kids in the bar," Openshaw said. "An argument broke out. We don't know over what. We don't know whether Whitman was involved or just an innocent bystander.

"The fracas apparently spilled over into the parking lot and Whitman was shot in the stomach." Openshaw added. "He died in the ambulance on the way to a hospital."

Charles A. Whitman, a prosperous plumbing contractor who in 1966 flew to Texas to bring home the bodies of his wife, Margaret, and eldest son, identified the body of his youngest son.

Openshaw said John Whitman, a good looking man with shoulder-length blond hair, had managed to "shrug off the past" and didn't let "his brother's crime tear him up that much."

But in 1966 and 1967 police said Whitman had several brushes with the law for offenses ranging from breaking and entering to speeding.

Probers Give Martha Hint To Stay Away

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee has dropped a rather pointed hint that Martha Mitchell not attend the Watergate hearings next week when her husband, former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, testifies.

But it is understood that the flamboyant and outspoken Mrs. Mitchell has rejected the committee's offer to provide her with a color television set in a private room if she'll stay away.

Mitchell's attorney, William G. Hundley, said, "It's pretty much up to her" whether she attends the hearings, and he doesn't know if she'll be there.

One of the points Mitchell is expected to be questioned closely on is whether he resigned as chairman of the President's reelection campaign because of Watergate or because of an ultimatum from his wife.

Shortly after the Watergate burglars were caught in Democratic party headquarters a year ago last June 17, Mrs. Mitchell threatened publicly to leave her husband unless he resign. Without being specific, she spoke darkly of dirty doings.

Mitchell did quit two weeks after the break-in. Now he is accused in sworn testimony of helping plan and cover up the wiretapping, which he denies. He has pleaded innocent to charges of conspiracy, perjury and obstruction of justice in a New York campaign finance case.

Mitchell is expected also to be questioned on exactly what he told the President when he resigned. Mrs. Mitchell has complained bitterly that her husband is taking the rap for the President.

"Well, where do you think all this originated?" she said in an interview last spring. "Do you think my husband's stupid? And whom do you think he's protecting? Whom?"

It is "Mr. President he has been protecting under no uncertain circumstances," Mrs. Mitchell declared. "And if you remember a few weeks ago I suggested that Mr. President resign."

Mitchell later labeled any thought of Nixon resigning as "ridiculous." But when he's questioned about his wife's outspoken nature, he often just shrugs, saying, "What can I tell you? I love her."

Kuwait Prepares Plans To Build Naval Force

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait has prepared plans to build a naval force to watch its shores on the Persian Gulf and defend the country, the defense minister, Sheik Saad al Abdallah, said Wednesday.

The force will be made up of coast guard boats, torpedo boats and "the most modern equipment," the minister told the National Assembly.

He was defending a $1.5 billion armament bill proposed by the Supreme Council of Defense.

"Kuwait is going to buy arms according to its requirements and with no conditions attached," Saad added.

"It should be known that whenever we buy arms we will have a free hand to use them anywhere and any time we feel convenient and serves Kuwait's interest."

Answering a question, he said: "We will buy what we need directly from the manufacturers and never through a third party or agents."

The oil-rich state was reported recently to be interested in buying a small number of Phantom jets from the United States. Informed sources said Kuwait also is interested in ground-to-air missiles, torpedo boats, radar and an air defense system.

The naval units to be acquired are to be attached to the small Kuwaiti army and the conscription law is to be applied accordingly, Saad stated.

Kuwaiti officers are to be trained abroad in use of the sophisticated weapons, he added.

2 Paddle Canoes On Historic Route

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Rev. Charles McEnery and Reid Lewis paddled their own canoes to a landing Wednesday at the Gateway Arch, to the acclaim of several hundred spectators.

The two Chicago men left St. Ignace, Mich., May 17 to retrace the historic canoe route followed in 1673 by French explorers Jacques Marquette and Louis Joliet.

After lending their presence to the opening of a nine state festival here, Father McEnery, in the role of Marquette, and Lewis, as Joliet, will resume their 3,000-mile paddle Thursday with the mouth of the Arkansas River as their final destination.

WILL A HEARING AID HELP EVERY TYPE OF A HEARING LOSS?

Todays electronic hearing aid will help virtually all conditions, exceptions being those with TOTAL deafness and certain unusual losses which constitute a small fraction of the total.

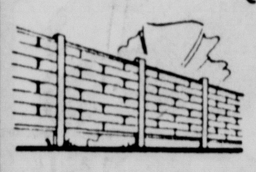

"Help", however, does not mean useful hearing. It is estimated that 96% of the hard of hearing can be helped by a modern hearing aid.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Thursday

Until July 22, Pisces has surge of favorable indications. Pisces natives now should be planning ahead, taking advantage of innate sense of timing. In August, there could be sigicant changes for many born under this intriguing zodiacal sign. Romance is in picture and so is constructive creative outlet for unique abilities. Pisceans should be planning and organizing for what will be a new lifestyle in 1974. Renewed vigor is featured for many of these natives.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Reservations, travel plans and relatives combine to create some difficulties. Key now is to seek harmony within family circle. Be diplomatic. Make concessions. Deal gingerly with Taurus, Libra persons.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Strive for quality. Be selective. One who talks much and complains even more may have ulterior motive. Be realistic. Insist on factual information. Pisces, Virgo persons might play important roles. Young person requires attention.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): More responsibility comes your way — and also greater chance to enhance prestige. There are problems but you can overcome. Capricorn figures prominently. Goal is in sight after you take minor detour.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accept fact that situation, relationship is drawing to close. This is time to look ahead to potential. Hanging on to past would not be constructive. Find ways of reaching more persons. Round out project. Deal with Aries.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Strive for fresh start. Money will be available. Key is to emphasize personality, personal magnetism. Utilize innate sense of showmanship. Means be graphic. Illustrate meanings. Favorable response is due.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What seems like senseless delay is likely to boomerang in your favor. Leo could be in picture. Highlight independent course. One you respect could complain of lack of energy. Be patient. If considerate, you are given needed material.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Light touch is best for now. Socialize. Enterain and be entertained. Leave fine points, details for another time. Perceive picture as a whole. Be aware of potential. Sagittarius, Gemini persons figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friend could confide dilemma. Be interested but don't promise more than can be delivered. Remember resolutions concerning health, work. Moderate, steady pace now is necessary. Avoid extremes, deal with Aquarius, Leo persons.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Let others show their hands. Lie low. Play waiting game. Professional superior may want your advice. Give it but be diplomatic. Get ideas committed to paper. Others have tendency now to misquote. Make views crystal clear.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stay home, if possible. Get to know family. Be receptive to needs of one born under Libra. Question of travel could arise. Give your opinion in forthright but kind manner. Younger person looks to you as example.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study fine points. Be sure you are seeing clearly. Avoid tendency toward self-deception. Money connected with joint enterprise could be subject of dispute. Permit logic equal time with emotions. Then you protect interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on contract, partnership, marriage. You get involved. There is no easy way. Be true to what you believe — stick to principles. Money and security are involved. Nothing occurs halfway — it is all or forget it.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensuous, emotional, have tendency to brood and worry. If single, marriage could be on horizon. Married or single, you do more traveling this year than has been true in recent past. December could be one of your most significant months in 1973. Be aware of diet. Of late, you have been eating while on the run. Stop it — for your own welfare.

4601 VINE STREET

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

Tralee — On a rainy morning in County Clare, we took the wet road to Limerick. "It looks like a fine day," said the man who filled the gas tank. (It was dripping rain. A good day for a wake I thought).

"There's a bit of blue in the sky," he said. "That'll be three pounds for the petrol" (gas is about 80 cents a gallon) he said, "the road to Adare now, is it? Go to the top of the street in Limerick. Not to worry. You can't miss it."

In half an hour I was hopelessly lost.

Ireland is well marked if you know what you are looking for. Road signs are in Gaelic and English. What you are looking for often appears only at the last minute.

In Ireland we drive on the left. The steering wheel is on the right. The trunk is "the boot", the glove compartment is "the cubby locker", the windshield is "the windscreen".

We don't fill up with gas, Maxwell. We fill it with petrol. The gallon is an imperial gallon — equal to five fifths of whiskey and the pound, with a hundred cents, is $2.63.

"You've been poorly misintormed, that's what's happened to you," said the next man. "Go back to the cross, turn right until you find where the road's up. Turn left and you can't miss it."

I missed it by a couple of miles.

We stopped at the Dunraven Arms in pretty Adare for a drink and lunch. I had 11 miles driven. It felt like I'd gone a hundred.

This is the major road to Cork. It is wide enough for two cars, and every Irishman feels it's big enought for three. In passing, the Irish shoot through gaps. They turn back in just before the crashing head-on. The Irish driver gauges your oncoming car in a split second.

He can tell — (but you can't) — if there's room for you to get by two wheels on the grass and give him room to slip through close enough to hand you a cup of coffee.

Rent cars here should carry a a sign: "American Driver, No Courage".

In busy Tralee with narrow streets I missed the turnoff to Ardfert which, they assured me in Adare, "You can't miss it." Doubled back through the traffic and stopped at McCrooms Pub where several men were drinking pints of dark brown Guinness Stout.

Irish pubs are cheerless places. None of the fireplace and polished brass beer pumps of the English pub. They are evening pubs with singing and a fine feeling. But the daytime drinking pub is apt to be cold and dark.

I said I'd have a few bottles of Harp Lager to take with me. And how did I get to Ardfert, six miles away?

"Ah," said a drinking man wiping the froth of the Guinness off, "you've got to go back to the roundabout. Take the turn to the right.

"Not the first turn to the right but the second," he said. (As I saw it the circle had about seven turnoffs.)

A second man put down his glass and he said, "Now it's not like that at all. Look here" he said, leading me to the street. "See the cream building? Now don't turn there but at the next. Not to worry. You can't miss it."

The third man said he lived near Ardfert. He'd show me. He took me an entirely different way I got off and pointed. "You can't miss it."

Which I did until a couple of schoolgirls put me on the road. And so I arrived at Ardconnell farmhouse.

The children said, "Why are you beating your head on the table, Daddy?"

I said, "Fetch me the whiskey. It's in my suitcase. You can't miss it."

Cat Named 'Dog' Sought

A cat named "Dog" who bit someone Saturday evening is the object of a search in Palmyra.

He is a Sealpoint Siamese male about a year old. His coloring is medium brown with dark brown to black markings on his face and ears and he is wearing a red collar with silver studs and a rabies tag.

If the cat is not found by Thursday, the young man bitten will have to undergo a series of rabies shots.

Anyone with information about this cat should call the Humane Society.

New Orleans Lad, 13, Best Fence Painter

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — A freckle-faced 13-year-old from New Orleans won the National Tom Sawyer Days fence painting championship Wednesday.

The contest is held every year in Hannibal, boyhood home of Samuel Clemens, who authored "Tom Sawyer" under the name Mark Twain.

Charles Campbell topped 13 other contestants in the competition in spite of a fall in the final heat of the championship. The judges apparently overlooked the slip, due to the slippery surface caused by misapplied whitewash from earlier contests.

Young Campbell, in accepting a $100 U.S. Savings Bond and a trophy, thanked the people of Missouri for allowing him to "have such fun."

The youngster's trophy will be displayed in the capitol at Baton Route, La., for one year.

Judges for the fence painting event included Jack Callahan, 54, of Fullerton, Calif. He posed as Tom for artist Norman Rockwell's 1936 work depicting the fence painting episode.

The picture was featured last year on a commemorative stamp.

Escapees Take Day To Heart

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Prisoners at three Texas institutions took Independence Day to heart Wednesday as 11 inmates made it outside the walls.

Six men escaped in two separate incidents from the Harris County Rehabilitation Unit county jail in the northeast section of the county. Five of the six were quickly recaptured.

Four men escaped from the Ramsey Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections in Brazoria County and one got away from the Center Unit in Fort Bend County.

Court Strikes Social Security Legitimacy Rule

Washington (UPI) — A three-judge federal court ruled unconstitutional a law barring Social Security benefits to illegitimate children who were born after their fathers reached 65.

The decision came in the case of a Washington, D.C., electronics production specialist who, between the ages of 65 and 71, fathered four illegitimate children.

The court said the man had lived with the children and supported them, enabling them to meet all requirements for benefits except for age.

The panel held the law discriminated against the illegitimate children because "no such requirements are imposed on legitimate children born after their father becomes 65."

Government attorneys had argued that the regulation was designed to impose conditions of proof of paternity before benefits could be granted.

Babysitter Dies; Murder Charge Placed On Boy

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — An 8-year-old Jacksonville boy has been charged with murder in the death of his babysitter, police said on Wednesday.

Police said the boy was placed in the care of juvenile authorities Tuesday after Windsor Miller, 79, died in a Jacksonville hospital. On June 27 he was shot while looking after the child at his own home.

Homicide Detective J.C. Wilson said Miller was apparently trying to discipline the child and the boy became angered when ordered to go inside his home.

"The child apparently went inside the house, found the babysitter's revolver and fired three shots, one of which struck Miller in the forehead," Wilson said.

It Was A Sale Of His Lifetime

By JERRY IDOUX
Star Staff Writer

Right in the middle of the bid on an old primitive, the old man first caught my attention.

Fascinated by the child-like glitter in the eyes of the man, smartly dressed in shades of conservative green, I sometimes bid too much for an item I really didn't want — or too little for a piece I did want.

It was a late-June auction, advertised as "the sale of a lifetime." Being a relative newcomer to the aura of auctions, I stood watching the skillful auctioneer solicit bids from the ever-increasing crowd.

And all through the hot, seven-hour day the man's eyes also attentively followed the luring, pied-piper voice of the auctioneer as it drew the right price from the winning bidder.

Howard Deems paused occasionally during the sale to talk to friends or to relate the history of a certain item to a prospective bidder — but never bid on any of the items himself, which is an unusual performance at most auctions.

But not this one. Deems, who is moving to Arizona with his wife Alice, had already owned everything that was included in the two-day sale.

Ranging from homestead primitives, fashioned by early Nebraska pioneers, to cast iron bells, the sale was a liquidation of Deems' lifetime collection.

His collection started when he made his first auction buy in Steel City, Neb. at the age of 15. For 58 years since then it has grown.

"I have always liked to go to auctions," Deems said. "When I first started going to them they served free lunches. I liked the free lunches too."

> "An auction pits your wit against somebody else's."

Most of the pieces on sale were used by the 73-year-old collector as museum items in his home or as teaching aids in the classroom. But with the advent of his retirement and the move to Arizona, a lot of them had to be sold.

"We're moving to a 4-room duplex in September or October and can't take all of the pieces with us," the retired University of Nebraska agricultural education teacher explained.

"My wife and I decided to keep all of the sentimental pieces so it doesn't hurt me too much to see the things sold," Deems said.

"Besides, I get a kick out of selling things. It's exciting," he said. "An auction pits your wit against somebody else's."

In addition to the lure of the sale, Deems likes the human element of an auction.

"It takes a certain type of person to go to auctions," said the energetic Deems, "a bargain hunting quality."

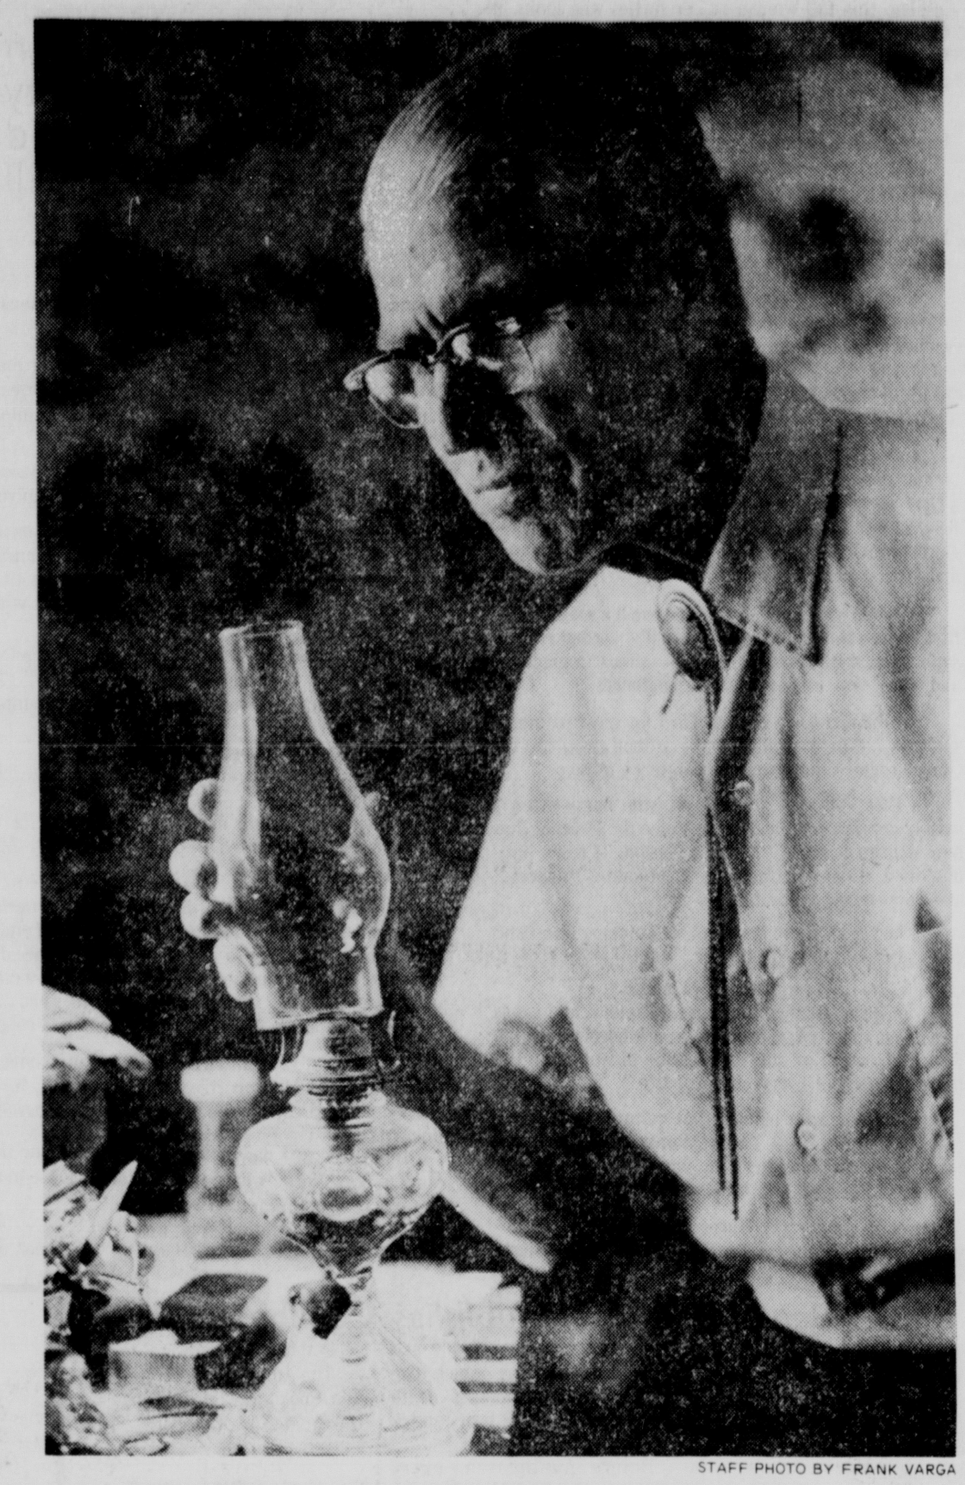

"To really enjoy the action of an auction you have to be a bargain hunter. Sometimes you find the bargain that you've been looking for and sometimes you don't."

"But that's what makes an auction worthwhile," he said.

"There's a lot of sociability that goes on at an auction. A lot of people talking to each other and discussing pieces that are on sale."

"And auctions are great studies in human nature."

Watching people batter and bargain against each other captivates Deems. And the prices that some individuals place on items surprises him at times.

HOWARD DEEMS . . . examines one of his antiques.

During the second day of his huge auction, Deems gleefully watched a group of old coats and garments go for as high as $10 apiece.

> "There's a lot of sociability that goes on at an auction. A lot of people talking to each other and discussing pieces that are on sale."

Taking time out from the sale to sit down and talk he later admitted he considered the items "throw-outs" that he had contemplated junking a few years ago.

"Now who would of thought somebody would have paid that much money for that stuff.

"But then, I guess that most people just threw stuff like that out instead of saving it like I did and now it's hard to find it around," he said with emotion rising in his eyes.

And with that he was off again to follow the sale, studying each piece on the block, but more importantly studying the people who surrounded the table where the bidding had now moved.

He was caught again in the lure of the auction, savoring the last few hours of the once-only sale.

While walking home, as the meticulous, drumming tone of the auctioneer faded in the distance, the impact of those youthful, soul-searching eyes fell upon me; and, like Deems, I, too, felt the lure of the auction atmosphere.

Don't Make Learning Into Miniature Rat Race

By ARTHUR J. SNIDER

Psychologist Edward Zigler, Yale professor and director of its Child Development Program, still encounters mothers who are anxiety-laden over the "mobile syndrome."

When their children were infants, they failed to place mobiles (moving objects) over the cribs, and now what can they do to rectify the error, even though their children are 17 or 18 years old?

Zigler patiently explains there is no gadget or gimmick to be given an infant, toddler or preschooler that will guarantee an elevated intelligence qqotient at maturity.

The mobiles, as well as the educational toy craze, crew out of the notion that artificially stimulating the child's environment will give him a superior mind. The environmental mystique prompted Reader's Digest several years ago to attach a flier to its cover reading, "How to raise your child's IQ by 20 points."

Where once mothers and fathers went to toy stores to find an object the child would enjoy, they now seek toys that "teach." In Zigler's view, the child can learn more by playing with pots and pans, especially if the parent is interacting with him.

Books on teaching a child to read at age two are popular but Zigler wonders why parents would want to waste a child's time performing intellectual tricks, when he is confronted with all the developmental tasks a two-year-old must master.

"I can only conclude," Zigler writes in Human Behavior, "that the activities have much more to do with the egos of parents than with the ego-development of children."

The well-meaning though doubtful efforts to improve the I.Q. is a "pressure-cooker" approach, in Zigler's view, and overlooks the fact that learning is as natural to the child as flying is to birds.

"A healthy child comes equipped with a very powerful motive to learn and most children will achieve their full intellectual potential, regardless of the specific child-rearing and educational practices," Zigler reassures.

"Learning by the child is a continuous process and is not limited to the formal teaching efforts that impress adults. The child learns from every event he participates in, from his peers, from his play and even when doing nothing more than chewing on a blade of grass and contemplating a cloud passing overhead."

Too many parents mistakenly believe that unless a child is engaged in an adult-directed formal educational activity, no learning is taking place.

"For many children, we have managed to make the enjoyable enterprise of learning into something distasteful," Zigler asserts. "It is no longer unusual to find in the very early grades of elementary school children burdened with hours of homework, hours much better spent in other developmental activities.

"We must not deny our children their rights to a childhood, forcing them into a miniature version of the rat race."

The problems of children today are not the result of intellectual shortcomings, Zigler says, but rather motives and values.

"Thousands of bright children have opted for a life of drugs and apathy or wandering our nation aimlessly," he adds. "They doubt their own worth. They feel they have little to offer society and society has little to offer them.

"Society in general and parents in particular have a responsibility that extends far beyond the production of a few more IQ points."

'The Autograph Hound'

Walter Mitty rides again — this time in the guise of one Benny Walsh, hero of John Lahr's first novel, "The Autograph Hound" (Alfred A. Knopf).

Lahr — whose previous book, "Notes on a Cowardly Lion," was a biography of his famous father, Bert — has created in Benny an immensely humorous and, at the same time, pathetic character. An all-too-human figure — a nobody obsessed with success — whose life is a tragicomedy of the first order.

Benny could be found anywhere, but by placing him in the megalopolis that is New York City, Lahr has emphasized the fact of his crushing insignificance.

This is important, you see, because Benny is very concerned with significance. Working as a busboy at a New York restaurant frequented by actors, actresses, sports figures and political dignitaries, he is the Autograph Hound of the book's title.

In between scraping dishes and loading trays, he manages to con notables out of their signatures. When not working, he roams the streets of New York, and stands at theater doors waiting for the arrival of Anyone Famous.

Back home, he inserts his scribbled trophies in a massive file which, at the outset of the story, contains 2,376 John Henries. It seems that, at one time or another, virtually everyone from Bob Hope to Jimmy Hoffa has fallen victim to his endless quest.

Now, collecting autographs is not, in itself, all that odd. It's just that Benny has made a fetish, a life-style of it. And in the world that he has created for himself, the distinction between reality and illusion is very difficult to perceive.

His long standing preoccupation with the famous has inclined him toward delusions of grandeur. He spends a good deal of his time fantasizing: Benny the quarterback for the New York Mets, Benny the major league pitcher, Benny the star of stage and screen.

Even his real existence as busboy and nobody is magnified into something it isn't. His years of loyal service at the restaurant (where only he can do the job properly), his brief interludes of contact with the greats, even the fact of his autograph collection, are, to him, momentous feats, deserving of recognition.

However, that recognition never comes, and there remains a nagging feeling of futility. Witness a conversation between Benny and the chef, Zambrozzi:

" 'Cooking's like life,' says Zambrozzi. 'You have to have the right ingredients and the know-how . . . Write that down,' he says.

"I put it in my pad, but I disagree. Cooking's not like life. If you get a bad meal, you don't have to eat it."

Throughout, this tale of woe is really very funny. It abounds with humorous one-liners ("Skin is God's undershirt") delivered in deadpan fashion; singular characters, and ludicrous scenes (Benny asking for a negative of his chest X-ray; Benny making a call on a public telephone: "I try the number once without the dime so I get used to dialing. I don't want to lose my dime.")

Lahr's style lends itself well to humor because it is so unpredictable. Statements, entire conversations evoke chuckles because they don't follow what went before. The author has proven himself a master of the literary non sequitor.

Further he has created a character that really lives. There's a little bit of Benny in each of us.

Perhaps that's why it's so easy to laugh at him, and — when someone tells him, "You're not a very important person" — to feel the hurt.

Jill Johnstone, Lesbian And Human

New York — She's been called America's leading lesbian, this tall woman in her forties who looks like an aging cheerleader. Pug nose, long brown hair — a trifled streaked with gray. Bangs. A rangy, athletic grace.

In a blue denim-shirt and pants, topped by a lumberman-style plaid jacket with rolled-up sleeves, Jill Johnstone leans back and fiddles with the assortment of mementos on a chain around her neck — Egyptian scarab, an ancient Persian coin, red Mexican beads, a huge wheel-like thing.

"Movement's Worst Enemy"

She's the one who jumped into an East Hampton swimming pool at the height of a benefit party for women's liberation, stripping off her shirt and emerging half-nude, provoking Betty Friedan's wrathful accusation that she is the "movement's worst enemy."

And she's the one who interrupted an ultra-serious panel discussion of the women's movement at a New York auditorium by leaving her seat, and to the horror of fellow panel members Norman Mailer and Germaine Greer, rolled around on the floor, hugging and kissing her girlfriend.

So when you meet Ms. Johnstone it's a surprise to find her a quiet-spoken, intellectually worded conversationalist, with an easy laugh — almost a giggle — and a shy way of not finishing sentences.

"Lesbianism is a deadly word for most women," she says. "But basically I believe that given the optimum society most women would be lesbians."

In that vein, Ms. Johnstone, who has written a weekly column for the Village Voice for 14 years, has now written a book, "Lesbian Nation." Critics have described it as "outrageous," "unique," "honest," and "downright enjoyable."

In her words, the book is an "autobiography and political dovetailing of my life."

Oppression Of Women

It recounts many of her sexual exploits, and urges a bonding together of women in a kind of "Lesbian Nation" to ward off the "oppression of women in the home, in bed, in every phase of life."

"This is a male homosexual culture we live in," Ms Johnstone says. "Men dominate by bonding together socially and excluding women, allowing them only kaffe klatches and bridge parties."

Women, she says, "through sexual involvement which brings prime commitment," should similarly bond together to buy land, set up corporations and stores, form political caucuses.

> "I believe that given the optimum society most women would be lesbians"—Jill Johnstone

She is neither concerned with the fate of men in such a society nor with the loss of humanism or equality between people through a woman-dominated world.

"When people bring up these questions, I simply reply, are we talking about faminism or feminism?"

And, as for allowing each individual to express themselves in their own way sexually, Ms. Johnstone again circumvents the discussion by insisting that a woman's "first great sexual experience was with a woman, through birth."

Even orgasms, she says, are really a "re-enactment of the birth-death experience." And heterosexual love is, she says, simply an "attempt to re-enter the womb."

Opposites Detract

"Erotic love is narcissistic love," she says. "Opposites detract."

All such arguments aside, Ms. Johnstone has not always recognized herself — or the need for all other women — to be lesbian.

She is the illegitimate daughter of an American nurse and British businessman, was born in London, but returned to America as an infant to be raised by her mother and grandmother. "It was an all-woman existence from the very beginning," she says. "No brothers, no fathers."

Schooled at an all-girl Episcopalian convent overlooking the Hudson River near Peekskill, N. Y., she went on to earn a B.S. and a Master's degree in fine arts.

Interested in a dance career, Ms. Johnstone then came to New York "where I was suddenly loose in the real world and I didn't do very well."

Mother And Wife

She went through what she calls her "peck and peck period — hats, gloves, earrings, the whole bit," met and married a young man from St. Louis, Mo., who aspired to be a literary critic, had two children, and fell into the artsy-craftsy life of a young village matron.

"I had had a few lesbian affairs before my marriage, but abandoned that for a good 10 years," she said.

Her marriage broke up in 1960, her husband ultimately remarrying and taking custody of the children, a boy, Richard, now 15, a girl, 13.

In 1965-66 she had three nervous breakdowns, and it was then that she began to recognize — and ultimately — politicize her lesbianism.

During this time, her column in the Voice also shifted from straight dance criticism to a more personal kind of revelation, long, unstructured, often unpunctuated and uncapitalized, almost poetic ramblings rife with puns, quotations from other sources, sexual encounters and personal realizations about human sufferings, loneliness and folly.

She loves "Vanguarditis," she says. Norman Mailer, whom she believes to be the ultimate male chauvinist pig sexist, is the "bean of Amerikan litters," and, in conclusion, "The poof is in the putting."

Her archcritic Friedan obviously "wants to be a man. I hear she even wants to be a Senator," and soon, the way the women's liberation movement is compromising, all women will be happy if the man does the dishes and takes the kids out once in a while.

Core Of Movement

Lesbianism has to be the real core of any women's movement, as it does not allow for compromise with a male point of view, she adds. With "the elimination of distinction — since men and women are now equal," she adds, "who besides lesbians will end up crying vive la difference."

Still in all, Jill Johnston, word collage-maker and leading lesbian, reverts to plain old human being when it's said and done. One who questions herself and her art and her life.

"Maybe there's another explanation for all this," she says finally, leaning back and sighing, ever so slightly. "Maybe coming out as a lesbian has frightened me into playing word games to obscure my own coming out."

Heart Association Publishes Cookbook

Dr. Charles B. Carignan, Jr., president of the Nebraska Heart Association, recently announced the publication of "The American Heart Association Cookbook."

Dedicated to the pleasures of eating well, while eating right, the new cookbook contains more than 500 fat-controlled, low cholesterol recipes showing Americans that heart-healthy foods can be as enjoyable and satisfying as those which can contribute to premature death and disability from heart attack and stroke.

Before publication, every recipe in the book was medically evaluated and kitchen tested. In addition, consideration was given for taste appeal, nutrition, ease of preparation, availability of ingredients and a broad representation of geographical and cultural tastes.

"The American Heart Association Cookbook" is published by David McKay Company, New York.

Now you see us, now you don't.

We are Capy and Brenda, the elusive Capybaras (Hydrochoerus hydrochaeris) at the Lincoln Children's Zoo.

We are new animals here and haven't quite gotten used to people yet — so we hide. But as the summer progresses, we will undoubtedly get friendlier and will stay out more and more.

Though we are hard to see, we do appear from time to time, usually to take a swim.

Here at the zoo, we live most of the time in the dense undergrowth, but being semi-aquatic, we don't wander too far from the streams.

And it is because of those streams that our home here is just ideal during the summer months. There is plenty of water which we need to keep our skins from drying and cracking. In fact, we would die if we did not have access to water.

Our semi-aquatic nature is quite evident from just the slightest glance at our feet. They're webbed!

There is another advantage to our home here. We are grazers and thus can eat all the foliage we want. But we do take a bit of food now and then from the birds' feeders. In the winter we live indoors where we eat grains, lettuce, fruits, and vegetables.

Our main claim to fame is that we are the world's largest rodents, and the adults of our species weigh more than 200 pounds.

In appearance, we resemble overgrown guinea pigs. We have similar facial and bone structures, and with them we share the characteristic short legs, though we have coarse hair while theirs is soft. Despite our similarity to the guinea pigs, we are more closely related to the beavers and muskrats of North America.

Although Brenda and I were born in captivity (a rare feat) in Santa Barbara, Calif., our ancestors live in the dense tropical regions of South America where they not only graze, but also eat aquatic plants.

In our natural habitat, Capybaras are considered real delicacies by the natives — and those natives also use our incisors as ornamental medicine.

But we have better uses for those teeth which are one inch long. We use them when we are forced to fight for our lives. Jaguars and alligators are our primary predators, but we have excellent defenses which help protect us from untimely deaths at their hands.

To escape from the land animals, jaguar included, we swim under water. In fact, we can stay beneath the surface for as long as three minutes. And to escape from the alligators, we take to the land.

Even though we are preyed upon from all sides, land and water, we much prefer those escape routes to using our sharp, devastating incisors.

There is still another way in which we outsmart our predators. We are diurnal animals, meaning that we are more active during the day. But, in areas where we are hunted from dawn to dusk, our relatives are able to adapt to their situations and become nocturnal beings, meaning that they sleep during the daylight and become active during the hours of darkness.

and West leads the jack of clubs. East takes dummy's queen with the ace and shifts to the queen of diamonds.

The contract seems easy enough to make, but when you win the diamond with the ace and play the king of trumps, West shows out and you start to have second thoughts in the matter.

It now looks as though you'll have to find West with the ace of spades so as to discard your diamond loser on one of dummy's high spades, but, when you lead a spade to the queen, East shows up with the ace and your chances go plummeting still further.

This time East returns the jack of trumps — it would make no difference if he played a diamond — and there you are, faced with the loss of a trick in each suit and unexpected defeat. But bridge is a game of twists and turns, and, if you put your mind to the problem, you can make one loser disappear. You must aim to circumvent East's apparently impregnable trump holding.

You win the trump return with the queen, play a spade to the king, ruff a spade, play a club to the king, ruff a club, then lead a diamond to the king and cash the ace of trumps before playing dummy's last club.

At this point, dummy's last two cards are the eight of diamonds and six of clubs; East has the jack of diamonds and ten of trumps; and you have the nine of diamonds and eight of trumps.

It is true that East's cards are both winners, but he can't avoid being hornswoggled out of one of them, whatever he does. If he ruffs you discard, and if he discards you ruff. Either way you have him over a barrel and make the contract despite your theoretical four losers.

dear abby

Abby Fails Test

DEAR ABBY: Let's review the situation: During a written examination, one student whispered to another, "Gee, this test is hard."

The other replied, "I know."

The teacher observed the pair, so in grading them she added both their grades together and divided by two.

The student who suffered the reduced grade complained to you, and you supported his right to complain since he was not cheating.

Abby, I teach school, and I insist upon absolute silence during examinations. If I didn't, the students would be "commenting" about the weather, the time, how hard the test is, etc., all during the examination, and it's impossible to tell which comment is legitimate and which is to help a friend pass a test.

Furthermore, some students need absolute silence in order to concentrate, so any noise is not fair to them.

Those students were lucky they weren't in my room. I'd have given them both a zero.

HOUSTON TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: And judging from the number of teachers who wrote to express the same opinion, were they to grade my answer I, too, would have rated a zero. I hereby reverse myself. The only comment which can be considered legitimate during a test is, "Call an ambulance!"

DEAR ABBY: What do you do with a man who refuses to bathe or brush his teeth? He's a Saturday nighter from way back. He thinks if he takes a two-minute shower on a Saturday night it's good for a week.

I have hinted, nagged, told him outright, and even threatened to leave him. Nothing helps. He won't even use a mouthwash. And then he wonders why I don't care to kiss him. ICK!

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: In answer to your question: "What do you do with a man who refuses to bathe or brush his teeth?" — NOTHING!

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Everything's getting bigger these days . . . to better serve the American consumer.

Manufacturers and retailers have more space, more merchandise, more excitement, more customers. How do you reach those customers?

In newspapers, of course, the medium that lets you appear as big, as detailed and as informative as today's consumer wants you to be.

Compare newspaper spaciousness to the confinements of television, where you can mention perhaps 3 or 4 items in 30 seconds. Not enough to tell the full product story.

And since 8 out of 10 adults read a newspaper every day, you also get sizeable coverage of your market in a very short time.

Newspapers. In the days to come their advertising power will mean more than ever to the marketer who wants to get bigger.

CREATIVE COOKING...

Casseroles are one way to keep the food budget in line. They are sometimes more easily accepted by all family members, especially Dad, when the ingredients are left in recognizable pieces. Also, he can see how much less a nutritious casserole costs to prepare and how much fun you have creating your own recipes. We have talked about "I Made It Up" Chicken Casserole ideas, and now I would like to suggest another basic guide to "Create A Casserole."

Amounts
1½-2 cups cooked protein food
1 can condensed soup and ½-⅔ cup liquid
1½-2 cups cooked or canned vegetables
2-2½ cups cooked pasta or substitute
2-4 Tbsp. Topping
Salt, pepper and seasonings

Suggestions
beef, ham, poultry, eggs, cheese, fish water, milk, sour cream, broth, tomato juice parsley, green pepper, onion, celery macaroni, noodles, spaghetti, rice, potatoes, corn bread or cracker crumbs, grated cheese, crushed chips your family's favorite

Combine all ingredients except topping in 2-2½ quart greased casserole. Mix lightly. Sprinkle with topping. Cover and bake in 350 degree oven until golden brown and bubbly — about 20-25 minutes. Serves 4-6.

"Create A Ham Casserole:
1½ cups slivered cooked ham, 1 can Cream of Mushroom soup and ½ cup sour cream, 2 cups Italian green beans, 1 cup cooked buttered noodles, 1 to 2 crushed french fried onion rings, salt and pepper.

That's Life Under Martial Law In The Philippines

MANILA (AP) — The men from the Constabulary Intelligence Service interrupted the young vocalist chatting in his home with his sister and brother-in-law.

They were looking for his elder brother, a known student radical, but since they couldn't find him, they arrested the vocalist.

For good measure, they took the brother-in-law, too.

The constabulary released them after they spent 14 hours in the military stockade. No hard feelings, said the young men.

That's life under martial law in the Philippines.

Before martial law, the slim, neatly coiffed matron in her late 30s had sent her children, a boy 15, a girl 16, to Australia to study because she was afraid they would be kidnaped. She even thought of following them. Robberies and other crimes were committed nightly in the walled, patrolled village she and her husband inhabited in one of Manila's weathiest suburbs. Now, she said, robberies are down to one or two a month, and she is wondering if she should bring back her children.

That, too, is life under martial law in the Philippines.

That is the same martial law President Ferdinand E. Marcos is putting up for judgment before 35,000 carefully controlled citizens' assemblies July 27.

That is the same martial law which the president is discovering does not solve basic problems, even with decrees backed by the military.

Firmly controlling what was once Asia's most unrestrained press and broadcast media and leaning heavily on the military, Marcos has given most parts of the Philippines a semblance of calm unmatched in the country's 27 boisterous years of independence. Citizens even are paying taxes at a rate unparalleled in the Philippines.

But in nine months since he proclaimed martial law Sept. 23, Marcos has been unable to make peace with rebellious Moslems in the southern islands of Sulu and Mindanao, potentially the Philippines' major problem.

He is faced with providing Filipinos who are complaining about the rising cost of living with enough rice in the midst of Southeast Asia's greatest scarcity of the staple in decades.

Marcos is running into resistance from countrymen he wants to enlist in his campaign to bring discipline to a sprawling archipelago of 7,000 islands and create what he has labeled a new society. Voters are showing apathy. Military reservists resist appeals to register.

The regime has claimed advances for the economy under Marcos. Foreign reserves at $623 million are the highest ever, twice as much as one year ago.hBut $148 million have been borrowed and almost the same amount remains unspent because the country can't find the rice it must buy to avert major shortages. The government claims both red tape and corruption are out, and opposition congressmen are no longer trouble because Congress was banned.

Foreign investors are showing more interest.

Marcos' decrees have stripped gun-toting Filipinos of at least 523,000 arms, from revolvers to personnel carriers. The government says crime is down by 40 per cent. But police officials report that crime is making a comeback.

Gun battles between criminals and police have claimed 11 lives in a month on the streets of greater Manila. Police patrols are again swooping into waterfront slums during the midnight to 4 a.m. curfew hours to find wanted criminals, often picking up 10 innocent persons to find one fugitive.

Filipinos remain subject to arrest and detention without charge. Hundreds locked up when martial law was proclaimed remain in military jails. Two former senators, Benigno Aquino and Jose W. Diokno, political rivals of Marcos, have been held without charge in solitary confinement for nine months.

Political opposition is muted, exposing itself occasionally in underground pamphlets and newspapers which pop up mysteriously in the mails. They attack Marcos and what they claim is his American backing.

The Marcos regime has declared in an argument before the Supreme Court that a bill of rights is not supreme when the existence of the country is at stake. But lately, Marcos and top officials have been insisting that they have controlled the emergency under which martial law was declared.

Presidential palace sources said Marcos might ask the citizens' assemblies for a decision on whether or not to keep martial law.

The government still must deal in the south with a million persons displaced by fear or fighting and the loss of an estimated $20 million in damage and 20 per cent in the rice crop.

Marcos has said the Philippines will be short 600,000 tons of rice. He reported in May that the government had contracts to relieve the deficit with imports and prevent price rises. But Agriculture Department officials said in June they had commitments to import only 120,000 of the 450,000 tons they said they needed before the end of July to prevent "an unmanageable situation."

Marcos has said martial law was proclaimed to make long-needed reforms as well as prevent chaos. A keystone in his program is land reform, particularly in the rice-growing areas of central Luzon where the so-called New Peoples Army operates. The threat of what the government calls the Maoist-oriented guerrilla force was one of the reasons behind martial law. Since the land reform program began in November, 32,400 of an estimated one million tenants have received land, a pace which has brought expressions of discouragement from some architects of the program.

Some believe Marcos may find martial law difficult to cope with if he shows no greater success.

Life Looks Good In Malaysia; Prosperity Ahead Of Chaos

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Things look good in Malaysia. The economy is thundering along, and leaders are hard at work on their favorite sport of politicking.

Rubber prices are high, and an international consortium has even struck oil off the coast. Foreign investment is pouring in. Employers are hiring and the waiting lists are growing at the golf clubs.

But, it's still Malaysia and the ominous undercurrent of racial strife still eddies and flows under the calm surface.

Life is better these days for the half of Malaysia's 10 million inhabitants who are indigenous Malays. The rest, Chinese and Indians, still face economic and cultural discrimination.

Malays say the Chinese and Indians have controlled commerce for too long, and the rural-oriented Malays must be helped into the money economy. Government policies and plans do exactly that.

Non-Malays, with economic weight but little political power, contend that their roots go back for generations and their fortunes were won by hard work. Also, they say, there are poor Chinese and Indians, too.

In either case, the races seem to be getting along well on the outside. Malaysians measure relations in terms of May 1969 when riots in Kuala Lumpur killed hundreds. By that barometer, things are fine.

There has been no significant increase in Communist guerrilla activity along the Thai border, although the problem in Sarawak, an East Malaysia state on the island of Borneo, continues to be serious.

Many Chinese grumble that they don't want their kids educated in Malay, and some are sympathetic to the predominantly Chinese — and banned — Malayan Communist party.

But Chinese political leadership is in total disarray because of internal disputes over what position to take. The Indians, far less numerous, are also badly divided politically.

Almost by default, the Malay leaders have strengthened their already strong control of the government.

Parliament, which was dissolved after the riots, has been restored on a limited basis. But the ruling United Malay National Organization has absorbed most of the opposition by coalition and compromise.

The informally controlled press doesn't dig too deeply into ethnic policies and, in fact, it's against the law for legislators, reporters or anyone else to question Malay rights or status.

Opposition to the government is largely confined to individual beefing, usually to carefully selected audiences. It is widespread among non-Malays, though, and it could develop into something more serious.

But for the moment, at least, Malaysia has seldom looked better.

"Really, it's just booming," said a Western economist with a solid background here. "No one is saying, but I think that Malaysia is going to make a lot of money from the oil . . ."

The strike, by a consortium of Continental and El Paso of the United States and Broken Hill of Australia, was announced at 6,000 barrels a day, less than the production already going on in another part of Malaysia.

But there was a report of a major gas find nearby, and oil industry people are looking cheerful about the prospects.

And that's only one source. Malaysia is the world's leading producer of rubber, tin and palm oil. Timber has just replaced tin as the No. 2 export earner. New industries are turning out manufactured goods.

The government is plowing money into the economy, sending up prices but giving rural people a rare taste of purchasing power. New hotels and office buildings have transformed Kuala Lumpur's graceful skyline, and package tourists are swarming over tiny islands off the coast.

The boom, in fact, is far outpacing the government's ability to educate and train qualified people to run basic services. The university is overcrowded and many non-Malays are failing required examinations which must be taken in the Malay language.

Private companies, forced to hire a certain percentage of Malays, seek out and court promising prospects, like basketball scouts after 7-footers.

"You want a Malay who speaks English and can type as a clerk?" laughed one educated young Malay to a desperate friend. "With those skills he can be a company director."

Many argue that despite that initial problems, Malaysia's policy of advancing Malays and pushing its independence will give it a new and respected footing among its neighbors.

Leaders are, bit by bit, severing the thick ties that bind Malaysia with the nearby island of Singapore that was part of the Federation of Malaysia until 1965.

The currencies are no longer interchangeable and the stock markets have been separated.

Few observers hazard long-range guesses for Malaysia. There is always a potential for violence and chaos, and there is greater promise for bustling prosperity.

For the moment, prosperity is well out in front.

Boy, 13, Named Yankee Doodle

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kevin Kalled of Albany, N.Y., is this year's Yankee Doodle Dandy. He won the title in an essay contest.

Boys and girls born on the Fourth of July vied for the title in the 13 original states, and the winners came here for the final competition. Kevin, 13 this Independence Day, won with his essay, "What My American Freedom Means to Me."

He and runner-up Elizabeth Hodeil of Stevensville, Md., were invited to read their essays at the city's official holiday celebration at Independence Hall. Elizabeth also turned 13 this July 4th.

Air Supports 12-Floor Building

Canberra — An Australian has developed what is believed the world's first multistory air-supported building. Under his principle, up to 12 floors of a building are suspended by cables from the roof.

The roof rests on a cushion of air trapped within the building's plastic walls, and internal air pressure is maintained by fans.

Entry to the building is by means of a simple airlock.

'Bill Penalizes Small Schools'

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

An official of the Nebraska State School Boards Association said he intends to push for legislation in the 1974 Univameral to exempt school districts attempting to gain certification from the penalty clause of the 1973 state aid bill.

"It's not right to penalize small schools that are trying to bring themselves up to certification and have to top the ceiling to do it," Ross Rasmussen, executive director of the association, said.

The $20 million increase in state aid to public schools approved by the 1973 Legislature imposes a ceiling on school district budget increases. The law restricts the schools to budget hikes reflecting a 3.65% jump in the cost of living and a 6.49% rise in wholesale prices. The law also contains a provision for increases in enrollment.

Share To Be Cut

School districts which exceed that limitation will have their share of the $20 million chopped dollar-for-dollar by the amount they overspent.

The State Department of Education has acknowledged that the law will credit some headaches for smaller school districts, but State Education Commissioner Cecil Stanley said these districts should amount to no more than a "handful."

Rasmussen said he is making an effort to find out how many school districts are going to be adversely affected.

"I hope I can make as many contacts as possible with people concerned about this problem," he said.

As an example, Rasmussen said he knows of a small school district which intends to hire a new teacher this fall to bring it up to the standards needed for certification. However, the additional cost of the new teacher would represent a jump in the costs by well over the maximum allowed by the law.

To penalize such a school district, Rasmussen said, would amount to discouraging equal educational opportunities.

"For some school districts this is a major problem," he said.

Rasmussen said he was satisfied with the cost of living and wholesale price indices drawn up by the Department of Education and did not advocate raising them.

"We were glad to get some directives from the state," he said.

Robbery Trial's Evidence Stolen

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Between the morning and afternoon sessions of a trial, the evidence was stolen from a courtroom table.

Superior Court Judge Douglas R. Woodworth says he will rule Thursday on a defense motion for a mistrial.

The missing items which disappeared Tuesday included surgical gloves, a roll of masking tape, three paper sacks and a wallet allegedly owned by the defendant, Edward Marshall Hawkins, 22, who is on trial for robbery.

Two-Pronged Attack Launched By Parent

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Penn Central Co., parent firm of the financially troubled Penn Central Railroad, launched a two-pronged attack Wednesday against the railroad's court-ordered liquidation plan.

The parent firm first called on Pennsylvania state officials to go into court to block a federal judge's order sending the railroad trustees' liquidation plan to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It then announced the completion of its own reorganization plan for the railroad "diametrically opposed to the trustees' plan of liquidation."

Both disclosures were made late Wednesday afternoon by David Berger, Penn Central Co. attorney. They followed Tuesday's ruling by U.S. District Court Judge John P. Fullam, who has been in charge of the railroad's reorganization since it filed for bankruptcy three years ago.

Fullam did not rule on the merits of the trustees' liquidation plan but said it had to go to the ICC as a necessary step in the process of straightening out the giant carrier's affairs.

"Our plan is too detailed to go into now," said Berger. "But it involves agreements with the federal government. We will make copies of the plan available later on."

HAVEAGO EARNS AK WIN

Van Berg's Joey Bob Gets 2nd In Handicap

...OPSTEIN ENJOYS REVENGE

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Amidst the joyous celebration in the winners' circle, Ken Opstein remained calm in his greatest moment as a thoroughbred horse owner.

Although he had a few anxious moments when his 6-year-old standout Haveago was pressed early, he knew his runner was really never in trouble in Wednesday's $79,775 Board of Governors' Handicap. And he was rewarded for his patience with Haveago with the largest purse ever offered in Nebraska.

"No, I don't think you can say that it was one stable beating another or anything like that," the South Sioux City insurance executive said. "It was just a matter of our horse beating theirs.

"We thought it would be a lot closer than it was, but when Canadian Jeff quit earlier than when they probably wanted him to do, that meant that Joey Bob had to move sooner than expected."

Piloted by J. L. Lively, Haveago took command from the start of the mile-⅛th chase that attracted eight horses on a warm, humid holiday. Canadian Jeff, coupled with Joey Bob in the wagering, began challenging Haveago for the lead down the backstretch.

But before the pack even reached the half-mile pole, Canadian Jeff began tiring and that forced jockey Leroy Moyers to begin moving Joey Bob sooner than he had wanted on the track rated as heavy.

"He (Joey Bob) is a nice horse and he was running good down the backstretch," Moyers said. "I just couldn't get ahold of him and when we turned for home I knew that Haveago was going to win."

With a four-length lead entering the stretch, Haveago increased his margin before the 19,703 fans who made him a 7-5 favorite.

"When he was running down the stretch he kind of pricked up his ears and started looking at the valets and people along the rail so I kept hitting him to keep his mind on running," said Lively. "Canadian Jeff just tried to soften us up, but he couldn't do it.

"I knew when we turned for home, we had the race won," Lively said. "They say he (Haveago) really likes the mud, but he runs on any kind of track so I don't think the "off" track really helped us that much."

Opstein said the next start for Haveago would be in the $25,000-added Nebraska Racing Hall of Fame purse here next Friday over a mile and 70 yards. Haveago will go to Chicago's Hawthorne Park following this meeting.

While Opstein, Lively and trainer Monti Sims were relishing the Governors' triumph, Opstein revealed that his standout 2-year-old Princely Pleasure would run in the Arlington-Washington Park Futurity at Arlington Park near Chicago next Saturday. That race has an estimated gross value of $200,000.

But Lively is also scheduled to ride Opstein's 3-year-old champion Royal Knight here in the $75,000-added Presidents' Cup on that same day.

"We don't know what John will choose to do, but if John does decide to go to Chicago, we'll probably use Don Lewis, who has ridden him before," Opstein said.

In collecting his second of Ak's four major stakes paychecks' Opstein collected the biggest paycheck of his career — $43,876.25. Haveago returned backers for his seven-length verdict $4.80, $2.80 and $2.40.

Joey Bob, who finished 10 lengths in front of Rastaferian for the place spot, earned $15,157.25 for the Van Berg Stables and $3.00 and $2.20 to backers. Rastaferian showed for $2.40.

Although the result reversed an earlier neck decision Joey Bob had scored over Haveago in the Cornhusker Handicap, Opstein pointed to the late afternoon scratching of the speedster Begdari as a turning point in the race.

"It's not that I thought Bagdari would have won, but she has such early speed that we might have had to use Haveago more at the start and then that would have set up Joey Bob a little more.

"She has that tremendous speed for 6 furlongs that she could have really proved troublesome for us like she was in the Cornhusker," she said.

The victory boosted Haveago's 1973 record to three wins in nine starts for earnings of $93,859 and his career winnings past the $160,000-mark.

The purse also boosted Opstein's total earnings at Ak-Sar-Ben to $203,144.50. That figure is within striking distance of the record $272,706.50 earned by the M. H. Van Berg Stables last year.

Coupled with Royal Knight's victory in last Saturday's $54,725 Omaha Gold Cup, Opstein has won two straight of the top four races here. The only question now is not who will be the top-money winning owner, but if a record will be set.

And that's not bad for someone who entered the horse game only seriously three years ago.

HE'S STILL THERE ... Accident put Frank Sheridan in wheelchair, but he still coaches.

'Wheelchair Coaching' Exhibited By Sheridan

By MIKE JOHNSON
Star Sports Writer

Would you believe coaching from a wheelchair?

If it's at all possible, you will probably find Frank Sheridan, coach of the Meginnis AAA fast-pitch softball contingent, doing it.

Sheridan was involved in a car accident on Jan. 7 of this year and confined to a hospital room at Lincoln General until February.

At his own insistence, Sheridan was released at that time to accompany his Little Fry basketball team to the national championships in Seminole, Fla. While in Florida, Sheridan caught typhoid fever.

The typhoid fever caused infection in his left leg, which had been fractured in the car accident, and Sheridan was back in the hospital, this time at Veterans Hospital.

Sheridan was unable to organize Meginnis or attend the first few games this year. But nephew Clyde "Ago" Sheridan III and veteran third-baseman Herb Schrader fielded a team.

But as soon as the elder Sheridan could sit up, he received permission for hospital leave on three occasions to attend the Meginnis games. Now released from the hospital, Sheridan coaches the AAA club from his wheelchair.

"I love to work with the team," Sheridan said. "I played for a lot of years and this is the closest I can get to it now."

Schrader and "Ago" Sheridan are quick to lavish praise on the 46-year-old veteran softball enthusiast.

"Frank is an intelligent coach and a great strategist," Schrader said. "The secret to coaching AAA is to get the most out of the players and he does it."

"Even when Frank was in the hospital, he kept in touch with the team through the newspapers," Ago said. "He's been involved in softball a lot of years and he was determined to make it out this year."

Despite the confinement of a wheelchair, Sheridan still manages to get involved in a game. Whether it be shouting encouragement to his own players or baiting umpires and opposing team players, Sheridan is sure to make his presence known during the course of a game. "I've been kicked out of so many games, I can't even remember them all," Sheridan said. "Once, I even was kicked out of the stands."

Sheridan has worked with the Little Fry basketball program ever since the organization was devised 13 years ago. He still manages to follow the players he coached during that span of time.

"I try to keep up on my players," Sheridan said. "Every year, I try to see them at least once in action."

This year Sheridan was granted hospital leave at Lincoln General to attend the Lincoln High-Lincoln Southeast game, which included numerous former Little Fry players.

Sheridan's six sons have all played for him in the Little Fry organization. Louis, 22, Frank Jr., 17, Richard, 12, Neal, 11, and Dwight, 8, are all avid sports fans.

The oldest son, Dave, a 25-year-old just home from the Army, plans to join the Meginnis team to play shortstop.

Meginnis, however, has won only one game this year and currently ranks near the bottom the league standings.

"We had a 60% roster turnover this year," Schrader said. "Now that Frank's back coaching the team, just give us a little time and we'll get together."

Attendance, Mutuel Gains

A look at the attendance and mutuel handle increases should convince the "national" leaders that Ak-Sar-Ben belongs among the major tracks.

Through the first nine weeks of this year's 11-week meeting, the average crowd of 14,297 is 11.06 per cent higher than last year. The daily average handle of $962,676 is evidence that perhaps next year, Ak-Sar-Ben will show an average mutuel handle of $1 million each day — certainly among the top 10 figures in the nation.

"Our group business is probably 50 per cent higher than last year and each year it seems that it is 50 per cent above the previous year," Bowker said. "We're starting to draw people from Texas and Oklahoma where before Kansas City has been as far as we drew from.

"We've had several inquiries from groups down there about coming to the races," he said. "I talked with the publicity director of the Texas Thoroughbred Breeders' Association from Dallas and he's hoping to get a group up here this year."

Bowker also gives credit to Secretariat for the increased interest in racing. Younger persons, especially, are becoming acquainted with horse racing.

"Having a horse like Secretariat helps racing all over the country by putting racing in the spotlight," Bowker said. "People around the country who don't know racing except for the Triple Crown races on television are now going to tracks in their hometowns.

"We think that we're doing a good job of bringing in groups of young adults, especially on Saturdays," he said. "Young adults are willing to get groups together and go places and more groups are starting to come to Ak-Sar-Ben.

"I think another reason for the crowds this year is that John Maluvius (in his first year as Ak racing secretary after 27 years at Hollywood Park) has done an outstanding job of putting the races together."

Although Bowker didn't say it, another reason for the rise in Ak's popularity is the progressive outlook the Ak-Sar-Ben management and executive staff has taken towards the average fan. With free parking and $1 admission, the $2 bettor can afford to take his entire family to the races. And that's something that can't be said of "big-time" tracks.

National Outlook

Omaha — Strange as it may seem, by solving one "problem," Ak-Sar-Ben has discovered another "problem" that needs correcting.

The Omaha race track no longer needs to convince the Midwest that it is the finest thoroughbred racing plant between Chicago and the West Coast. But with ending that chore, the current situation is to prove to the rest of the country that Ak-Sar-Ben ranks among the finest plants in the land.

"There still are a lot of people in racing that look at us as a second-rate level on a national scale," frankly admits Stan Bowker, Ak-Sar-Ben's director of information. "But we're trying to inform people nationally that we have a first-class operation.

"Our overall stakes schedule is as good as any in the country with the possible exception of the New York tracks or Hollywood Park or Santa Anita in Los Angeles," he said.

With two $50,000-added races and two with $75,000-added price tags, Ak-Sar-Ben has attracted horses that are known nationally. While Triple Crown winner Secretariat will not race here, the major stakes races have gained what easily is the finest handicap field in Nebraska history — and that's one to gain national publicity.

"The handicap horses we've had for the Cornhusker Handicap and Omaha Gold Cup are far superior to those we had here 5 or 10 years ago," added Bill Murphy, Ak-Sar-Ben's administrative assistant, who is the veteran among the track's experienced administrative staff. "Those horses are recognized as top-category horses by major racing plants in the country."

Ak Rivals Set For Juvenile

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Paul Kemling and Jack Van Berg, who have been traditions around Nebraska horse racing for years, take on newcomer Ken Opstein in Thursday's 23rd running of the Juvenile Stakes here at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Kemling has his swift Queen's Turn, Van Berg will saddle Rambunctious Road, while Opstein will have an entry in the seven-horse race over 5½-furlongs in Prince Pleasure and Villa Fire.

The allowance stake with a $20,000-added purse for 2-year-olds has attracted the top freshman runners on the grounds.

Kemling's Queen's Turn was the juvenile champion at the Fonner Park meet this spring in Grand Island winning the Juvenile and Expectation Stakes. After faltering in her first two Omaha starts with sore shins, Queen's Turn captured the $22,100 Lassie Stakes on June 15 and then came back to annex the $26,600 Futurity Stakes one week later.

Her record stands at five wins in nine starts for earnings of $52,949 for her Aurora owner.

Van Berg's Rambunctious Road captured Ak's $21,350 Laddie Stakes before placing second-6-lengths behind Queen's Turn in the Futurity. His record shows one triumph in four starts for winnings of $17,053.

While those two experienced veterans have taken the spotlight over the years, Opstein, who won the Juvenile last year with Norman Regret, seeks the Juvenile with what might be termed his "second team."

He had nominated Destroyer, who breezed to an easy victory in his maiden start here on June 26 by three lengths. But Destroyer was scratched, still leaving Opstein with two of the swiftest juveniles at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Princely Pleasure has won his three lifetime starts — two here and his maiden encounter at Gulfstream Park in Florida for earnings of $13,416.

The largest share of that figure ($8,841) came when he scored a two-length verdict in the $16,075 Ak Freshman Stakes on June 8.

Villa Fire, who triumphed over Queen's Turn in his initial Omaha start, finished third to Princely Pleasure in the Freshman Stakes, 10 lengths behind his stablemate.

Villa's lifetime slate shows 2 victories and one second and one third for earnings of $10,067.

Other entrants include Rosy Scroggins' Sidney Pride, a winner of two of seven lifetime efforts; H. B. Clay and S. H. Struck's Sail Trimmer and T. A. and Dorothy Johnson's Spook Son.

Evert, King Set For Wimbledon Final

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Chris Evert Wednesday shattered Margaret Court's dreams of an unprecedented second grand slam and Billie Jean King hung on grimly to defeat Evonne Goolagong, setting up the first all-American women's singles final at the Wimbledon championships in 16 years.

The 18-year-old Miss Evert of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., playing what she called "the best game of my career," upset the top-seeded Australian 6-1, 1-6, 6-1 to begin the Fourth of July celebration on the packed center court of the All-England tournament.

Mrs. King, the defending titleholder from Hilton Head, S.C., made it an even blacker day for Australia by winning the other semifinal 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 after Miss Goolagong had saved seven match points.

The final on Friday will be the first time two American girls have appeared since Althea Gibson defeated Darlene Hard 6-3, 6-2, in 1957.

Mrs. Court won the big four titles first in 1970 and this year already had the Australian and French titles tucked away when she came to the $148,000 Wimbledon championships.

She met Miss Evert at the top of her form, however, and with the Florida girl's passing shots and lobs hugging the line like magnets, the Australian was forced back to play a baseline duel on Miss Evert's terms.

Miss Evert sped to a 6-1 lead in 25 minutes when Mrs. Court found herself unable to hold her service even once, although she broke back in the fifth game briefly.

"From the start," said Miss Evert, "I went for the big shots. I changed my game."

In the second set the big shots did not come off, and with Mrs. Court finding her rhythm for the first time, Miss Evert slumped 1-6.

"I thought Margaret would be really tough in the third," said Chris. "But I began hitting shots on the line and she didn't play so well and —well, I guess I was lucky, too.

The turning point came in the second game of the final set. Mrs. Court double-faulted four times and the last one was fatal because it put Miss Evert 2-0 up with her service to follow.

Mrs. Court only managed to hold her service once more—in the fourth game—despite another double-fault, of which she had 10 in all.

Billie-Jean defeated Miss Goolagong in last year's final, a sparkling affair compared to Wednesday's march in which both girls sprayed errors all over the place.

Mrs. King once again found the English center court crowd against her. She was unhappy with her game, often pounding her racket on the turf and characteristically talking to herself all the time.

Miss Goolagong found herself serving to save the match—which she did for seven match points. Then came the eighth, her drive overshot the baseline and Mrs. King was through to the final which she has already won four times.

The men's semifinals were scheduled for Thursday. Alex Mayer of Wayner, N.J., the only surviving American and unseeded player, faces Alex Metreveli of Russia, the fourth seed, and third seed Roger Taylor of Britain tries for an upset against second seed Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia.

Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Illinois and Romania's Ilie Nastase, the No.1 seeds in the doubles, made it to the finals with a hard-won 9-7, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 win against the unseeded West German Davis Cup pair Karl Meiler and Jurgen Fassbender.

Men's Doubles
Quarter-finals

NFL Confirms Offer Made

NEW YORK (UPI) — A National Football League spokesman confirmed Wednesday that a $30,000 bribe offer had been made in 1971 to former Houston Oilers center Jerry Sturm, and said the case "is now in the hands of the justice department."

"We have been aware of this situation from the very outset," the NFL spokesman said in reference to an offer made to Sturm by a former player for his efforts in affecting the point spreads of the final three Oilers' games of the 1971 season.

"Jerry did exactly what is expected from him in reporting the offer immediately," the spokesman continued. "From there we gave all the information to the proper authorities at the justice department and that's where it stands now. There's really nothing more we can do about it—especially since neither J

Snag Rules May Change

Changes in snagging regulations may result from analysis of data obtained during a recent survey on paddlefishing conducted jointly by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission and the South Dakota Department of Game, Fish, and Parks.

Both Nebraska and South Dakota are considering changes in their bag and possession limits.

Nebraska's present limit is two fish daily and four in possession. South Dakota's limit is one fish daily and one in possession.

The changes under consideration would make the daily bag and possession limits the same in both of the states.

Perhaps the most important change being considered in Nebraska is requiring fishermen to keep any paddlefish they snag.

Observations indicate some fishermen snag up to 30 or 40 fish per day, releasing a smaller fish after they have snagged a larger one.

This leaves a number of injured fish in the water, some of which may die from the snagging wounds.

The survey of Nebraska fishermen during snagging season, October 1972-April 1973, determined an approximate harvest of 4,300 paddlefish.

Total poundage taken during the season was about 73,100 pounds, for an average of 17 pounds per fish. The largest fish caught weighed 89 pounds and set a state record.

During the survey, commission technicians snagged 22 fish and held them for several weeks in a hatchery pond.

They found serious infection from the snagging wounds in about 50 per cent of the fish. Three of the fish died, evidently from the snagging injury.

Lyle Wins Bailey Bout

Oklahoma City (AP) — Denver's Ron Lyle knocked down Lou Bailey of Omaha, seven times, but never could find the knockout punch in pounding out a unanimous ten-round decision in a heavyweight fight Tuesday night.

Lyle, the fifth-ranked heavyweight upped his record to at 23-1 with his only loss coming to Jerry Quarry.

Bailey, who came into the fight with a 17-35-5 record, rebounded after each knockdown to deliver some stinging punches of his own.

However, except for the eighth round, Lyle never seemed to be hurt and was in command the whole way.

Bailey went down once in the first, twice each in the second, third and fourth, but continued to battle back each time.

After the fourth, Bailey fought Lyle on fairly even terms, coming closest to hurting Lyle in the eighth.

But Lyle quickly shook the punch off and continued to pound Bailey.

Rodgers Aids Als' Win

Regina, Sask. (AP) — The Montreal Alouettes posted a 24-10 victory over the Saskatchewan Roughriders in a Canadian Football League exhibition game Tuesday night.

The triumph was a morale-booster for the Als, who had never before beaten the 'Riders in their home park.

Much-heralded Johnny Rodgers, formerly of the University of Nebraska, showed his speed in leading the Montreal receivers with four receptions for 57 yards.

Montreal quarterbacks George Mira and Jim Jones both connected for touchdown passes.

Jones fired a 52-yard strike to John Eason in the second quarter and Mira hit Terry Evanshen for a 26-yard touchdown pass in the third.

The only 'Rider touchdown was scored by Walter Rhone, who took a 19-yard pass from Brian Lindstrom in the end zone in the final minute.

Canoe Race 'Unusual'

By Associated Press

Six teams showed up in Lincoln Wednesday morning for a rather unusual canoe race.

The race, part of the Capital City's Fourth of July celebration, was sponsored by the Midwest Canoe Association and the Holmes Park Marina.

Actually, there wasn't much paddling done, only the final leg.

The race was to have started with the teams paddling across Oak Lake on Lincoln's northwest side, but they got a late start, so they just picked up their canoes and ran.

The canoes and gear, weighing about 65 pounds each were portaged some seven miles through the streets of Lincoln to Holmes Park in the southeastern portion of the city.

After all of the toting, the competitors had to paddle around Holmes Lake twice.

It all took a little more than two hours, but when it was all over, the first two teams finished only 20 seconds apart.

The winners were Vern Mares and Todd Halley of Lincoln, second place went to Dave Hutchinson and Jeff Morehead, also of Lincoln.

Race officials had expected about 13 teams, including several Omaha entries, but apparently some of the prospective competitors found other things to occupy their holiday.

Kansas Probes Possible ADs

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — A search committee was scheduled to present new chancellor Archie Dykes a list of four candidates Thursday for the post of athletic director at the University of Kansas.

Dykes was expected to spend the weekend making a selection with the aid of members of the Board of Regents and administrators. Announcement of the new director will come at a news conference either Monday or Tuesday, sources said.

The list reportedly included Tom Butters, currently assistant athletic director at Duke; Ray Nagel, athletic director at Washington State; Clyde Walker, an assistant athletic director at North Carolina, and executive football coach Chuck Rohe at Virginia Tech.

Fairbury Falls To Mutual Life

Beatrice — Lincoln Mutual Life advanced to the finals of the Beatrice Invitational Baseball Tournament here by edging Fairbury, 2-0, in 12 innings in Junior Legion action.

Three successive doubles by Scott Schroer, Mitch Ohnoutka and Leo Jablonski gave the Lincoln team the win.

Pat Anderson with relief help from Dan Strizek in the 12th inning, blanked Fairbury on three hits.

Home Stand Slated For Omaha Royals

Omaha — The Omaha Royals open a 12-game home stand Friday at 7:30 p.m. in an American Association game against the Wichita Aeros.

After a four-game series with the Aeros, the Royals host the Denver Bears for a four-day series beginning Tuesday. The Tulsa Oilers invade Rosenblatt Stadium for a four game series beginning July 14.

HOLE IN THE GROUND. . . in mid-campus north of Love Library is becoming a library addition.

CONCRETE . . . poured into library addition forms.

PILINGS GO DOWN . . . for swim pool at fieldhouse.

Campus Buildings Growing

Activity should have died down a bit on the UNL campuses after regular classes let out in May. . .it has, but not much.

The rat-tat-bang-slam—zzzzz of construction crews moved in to keep things humming. And because of wetter-than-normal spring weather, hard-hatted construction workers are slaving to make up for lost time.

On the downtown campus, construction on the $3,780,000 addition to Love Library is "really moving," according to Tom Nycum, administrative assistant to the NU Physical Plant. However, the July 8, 1974, projected completion date of the library addition will likely be extended a month or two because of the weather, he said.

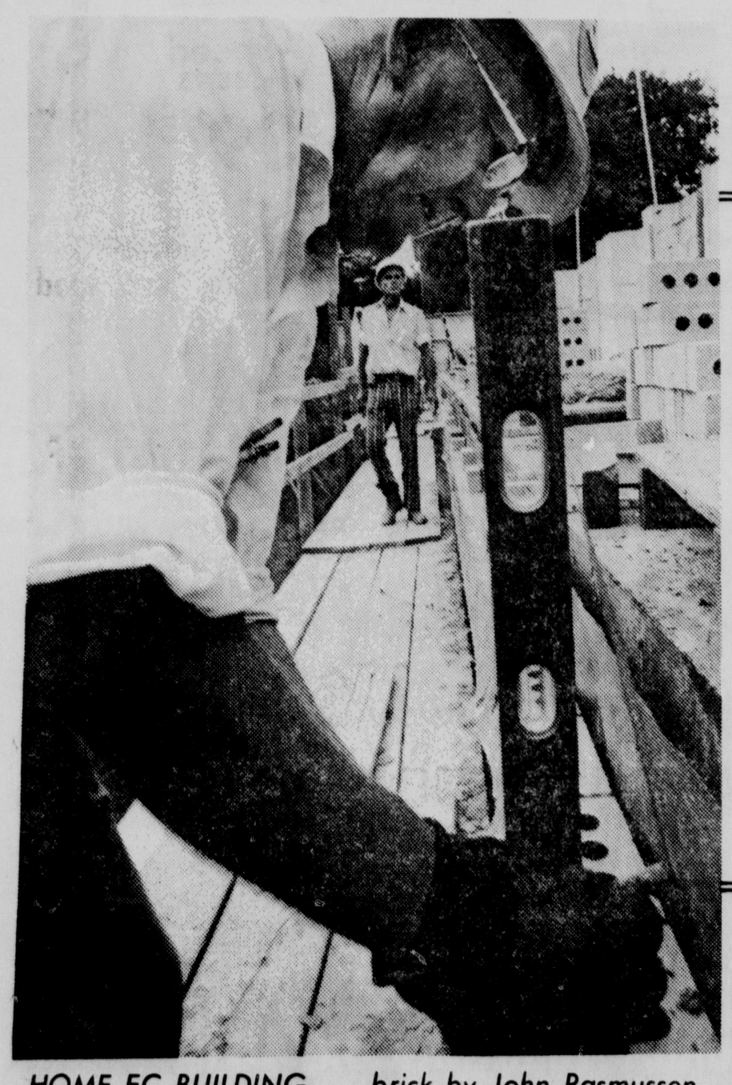

Sports fans anxious for completion of the $12 million fieldhouse at the State Fairgrounds can expect to view their first basketball game in the new arena in about 18 months.

Nycum said administrative officials are trying to push the completion of the arena portion "to get the basketball team in there for the Big 8's 1975 season."

The swimming pool and track won't be finished until February or March 1975, he said.

On the UNL East Campus, the $1,650,000 home economics classroom-laboratory building is scheduled for completion about the first of November, Nycum said. Again, because of wet weather, it may not be finished on time, he said.

Public Must Use Less Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — If President Nixon's proposed five per cent cut in national energy consumption is to be met, the public will have to do it, not the federal government.

The President said the government would take the lead in energy conservation by curbing its consumption by seven per cent in the next year. But that would not make a significant dent in over-all energy use.

In 1972, the latest available figures show, federal fuel consumption represented only about 5.4 per cent of the nation's total fuel use.

Cutting federal consumption seven per cent would reduce total national fuel requirements only one-third of one per cent.

But, as Nixon noted in his new energy message last Friday, the federal government "has its own unique role to play in reducing energy consumption and thus setting an example for all consumers."

The Pentagon, a heavy energy-user, began some conservation measures before the President made them a matter of executive policy.

Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements drew publicity last June 13 by ordering chauffeurs, who usually leave limousine motors running to keep cars air conditioned all day, to turn the motors off while waiting for their top brass to use the vehicles. He acted after critical publicity about those idling engines.

Less attention was attracted last November when the Pentagon issued orders to all services to reduce the use of vehicles, aircraft, ships and heating; cut the speed of planes and ships; and reduce unnecessary lighting.

Nixon estimated in his message that such moves would allow the Pentagon to save some 10 per cent of its energy demand.

Old Washington hands once joked about former President Lyndon B. Johnson's orders to turn off White House lights as an economy move.

But nobody laughed last month when the General Services Administration announced it was unscrewing about 10,000 light bulbs in its own building, roughly one out of every three bulbs, to save energy.

The agency, which manages federal property, also prepared instructions to regional managers for holding travel to a minimum, and to cut fuel consumption when federal employes must drive cars.

One federal employe who didn't wait for the instructions to come out was Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton.

Morton announced last May 21 he would do his official driving, henceforth, in a more economical Plymouth Fury, taking his Cadillac limousine out of the garage only for visiting dignitaries.

That seemed like such a good idea that Nixon told the whole federal establishment to start buying, leasing, and driving smaller cars.

In addition, Nixon told the federal agencies to reduce the use of air conditioning and, instead, to "encourage appropriate relaxation of dress standards in offices this summer."

The General Services Administration's bright idea to dim the lights became an order to all agencies.

Federal employes, the President reminded them, travel 250 million miles a year on business and burn up 17 million gallons of fuel doing it.

The Civil Aeronautics Board and Federal Aviation Administration were told to save a lot of somebody else's fuel by working with the Air Transport Association to reduce airline scheduled flights and adopt lower flight speeds.

Slowing jetliners by three per cent adds only 12 minutes to a transcontinental flight, the White House said. But it would save 200 million gallons of jet fuel per year.

It was suggested that consumers, in doing their part, drive cars more slowly and use less air conditioning and heating.

A warning to investors worried about INFLATION

Inflation has already slashed away nearly 2/3 of the dollar's 1940 purchasing power. William McChesney Martin Jr., former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, warns: "We have engaged in fiscal stimulus which is so far in excess of any reasonable requirement that it borders on the irresponsible."

Dr. Franz Pick, world-famous monetary authority, warns: "The U.S. dollar... has now entered the stage of terminal disease," and that bankruptcy is "inevitable."

And Harry Browne, whose book HOW YOU CAN PROFIT FROM THE COMING DEVALUATION accurately predicted the first dollar devaluation in 37 years, and the record gold prices, warns: "The alternatives are narrowed to either runaway inflation or a full-scale depression."

Your Inflation Defense

You are NOT helpless in the face of onrushing monetary disaster. While inflation and recurring monetary crises are destroying the assets of less knowledgeable investors, you can secure your life savings. Even during runaway inflations and severe depressions, a few farsighted investors manage to prosper. And you could be among the prosperous few. Our new booklet, The Case for Silver—How to Protect Your Assets Against Inflation, by Louis E. Carabini, President of the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange, shows you:

- Why silver is a valued hedge against inflation—proven effective for nearly 2,600 years.
- 3 powerful forces at work today which are speeding America towards further monetary crises.
- Why the peculiar nature of the supply and demand for silver makes sharp gains for silver seem inevitable—regardless of monetary crises.
- 2 common mistakes in silver investing—and how you can easily avoid them.
- How a new silver investment—the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange Protected Margin Account in silver coins—can protect your assets against inflation.
- How to open your Pacific Coast Coin Exchange Protected Margin Account.

May we send you a FREE copy of The Case for Silver? Simply rush the coupon below to the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange, Prudential Plaza Building, Suite 512, 1050 17th Street, Denver, Colorado 80202, or call (303) 573-1426.

Please do not delay—the price of silver coins is now in an uptrend. Your opportunity to invest in them so cheaply may not last long.

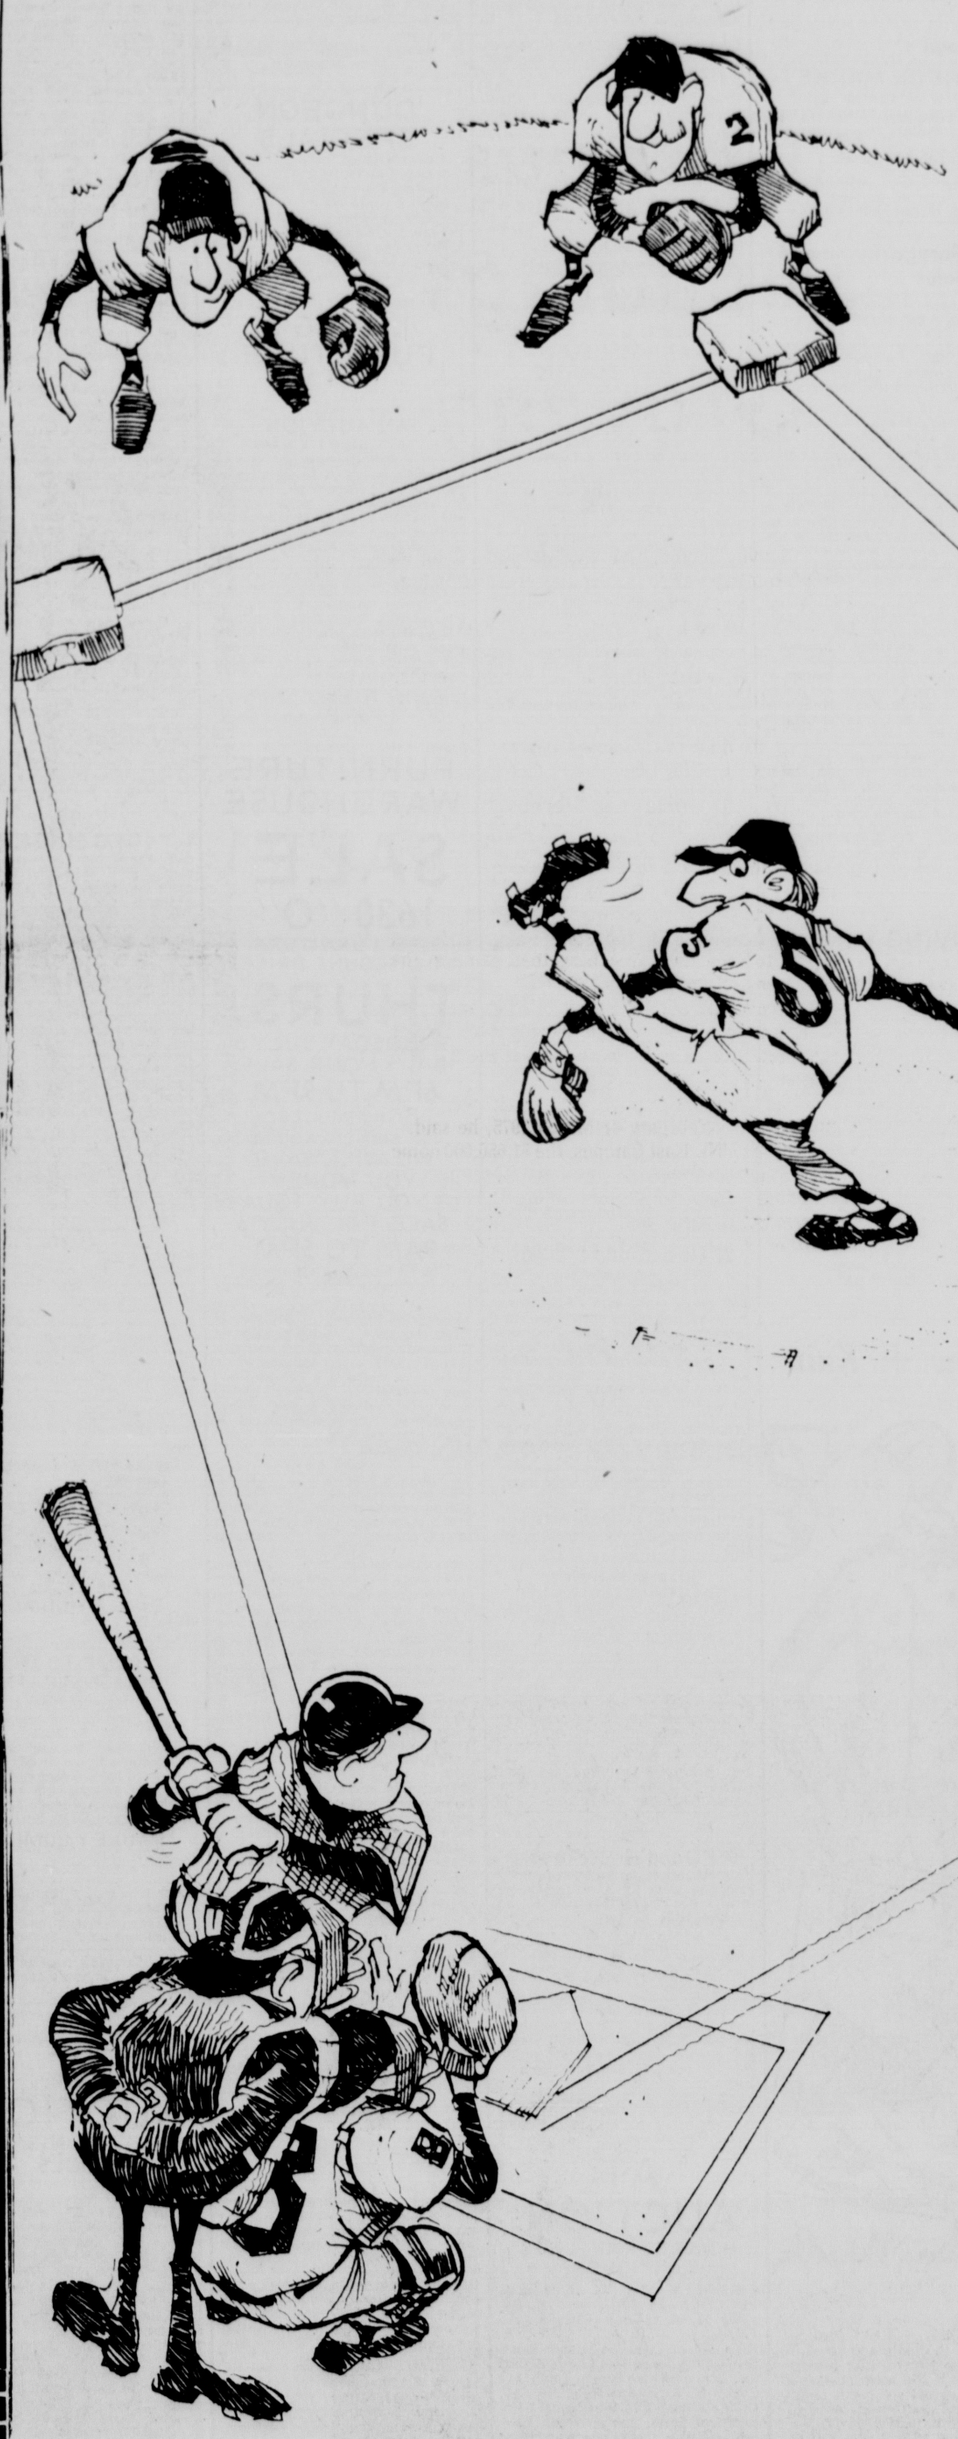

"It's possible for you to be confident that virtually no matter what happens, you and your family will not only weather the coming storms, but even prosper."
—Louis E. Carabini

Yesterday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 7-5
